Landon Talk To Wind Up Republicans' Maine Drive

Speech Is Set Saturday at Portland; Move Comes as Surprise.

Nominee Expects New Deal Defeat

Governor Will Celebrate His 49th Birthday Quietly Today.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., Sept. 8.—In a surprise announcement, Gov. Alf M. Landon said tonight he will go to Maine "to participate in the first fighting repudiation" of the New Deal by closing the State Republican campaign with a Portland speech Saturday night.

A brief one-sentence statement told the Republican nominee's plan and automatically canceled, at least for the time, a national conference of Young Republicans scheduled here Friday. Previous statements had projected a midwest farm tour late this month as the next major campaign swing.

"I am going to Maine," Landon said, "to help rededicate that State to the good government for which it has always stood and to participate in the first fighting repudiation at the polls of the kind of government this country has had for the last three years."

Maine's election day, the first in the Union, is Monday, September 14.

The Portland speech will be broadcast over the red network of the National Broadcasting System, but the time of its delivery was not set.

In Contact With Farley.

Aids sketched this itinerary for the trip:

Landon will leave Topeka Thursday night on the regular Santa Fe train at 8:25 p. m. (Central standard time). Arriving in Chicago Friday morning, he will take a New York Central train to New York City and there board a special train for the New England trip.

En route through Massachusetts, the nominee will make a few rear platform appearances. Plans for the return trip were not available.

Tomorrow the Kansan will celebrate the forty-ninth anniversary of his birth in West Middlesex, Pa. Eight weeks from today is the election. Tonight he attended a circus.

Aids said that unless it was elderberry pie—a favorite of the Governor—no special celebration of his birthday had been arranged. Mrs. Landon and the nominee's three children were in Estes Park, Colo. Only the Governor and his 79-year-old father, John M. Landon, occupied the executive mansion.

Landon came to his office as usual this morning, but remained at home in the afternoon. An extension telephone was at hand there, available for constant contact with the Republican National Executive Committee meeting in Chicago to map campaign strategy.

Owens Expected.

As this conference proceeded, the Governor said details of his major campaign swing into Midwestern farm States still were not finally determined.

The first speech was scheduled tentatively for Des Moines, Iowa, on September 22.

Landon planned to confer with Gifford Pinchot, former Governor of Pennsylvania, Thursday. Thursday, E. Ross Bartley, press representative, said Jesse Owens, Negro Olympic athletic star, was expected for a visit.

Teachers Defend Landon.

Chicago, Sept. 8 (AP).—The Republican National Committee released tonight a statement which it said was signed by leading Kansas educators terming as "the cheapest sort of political propaganda" any assertion that Gov. Alf M. Landon closed schools as a means of balancing the budget.

Women Envoys to Power Rally Tell of 'Missions' in England

Mrs. de Ferranti, Widow of 'British Edison,' Describes Efforts to Aid Workers; Miss Haslett Spreads Gospel of Electrification.

Mrs. Getrtrude Ruth Ziani de Ferranti, the widow of the "English Edison," is a small plumpish woman, with grey curls neatly arranged below her brown straw ballibuntl.

Her friend, Miss Caroline B. Haslett, director of the famous English Electrical Association for Women, Inc., founder and editor of the Woman Engineer, and the Electrical Age for Women, is entirely different. She's larger and more dynamic, ruddy of face and firm in gesture.

The two British women are the only two feminine delegates to the Third World Power Conference here.

Yesterday, at the Mayflower Hotel, they held a press conference.

Miss Haslett was late, because her hair was "too frightful" and she'd had a shampoo. So Mrs. de Ferranti told about her husband's company and her interest in it. He was the founder of Ferranti, Ltd., the great English electrical engineering corporation. His name was Dr. Sebastian Ziani de Ferranti, and he invented the mercury meter, the Ferranti alternator, the induction furnace, several systems of electric welding and high-speed spinning machinery for cotton mills.

Foe of Hoover Named to Head Secret Service

Murphy, 'Exiled' in Spying on G-Men, Recalled and Promoted.

By Robert C. Albright.

Joseph E. Murphy, "exiled" from his post as assistant Secret Service chief for spying on J. Edgar Hoover's "G-men," yesterday was recalled "temporarily" to take over drection of the Tresaury undercover unit during the illness of Chief W. H. Moran.

Murphy will work with Frank J. Wilson, formerly of the Internal Revenue Bureau intelligence unit. Wilson yesterday was appointed "acting assistant chief" of the Secret Service by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr. Wilson figured prominently in the Government's investigations of Al Capone and the Lindbergh kidnaping.

The unexpected shifts started immediate speculation as to who will succeed Moran, 72-year-old veteran Secret Service head. Moran is eligible to retire. He already has received two extensions, the last of which will expire on January 1.

Asks for Vacation.

Morgenthau disclosed that Moran, who has been in poor health for some time, has asked for a brief vacation, but technically will continue in command. To meet the situation, the demoted Murphy was summoned from his new Pacific

Proposal to Ban Jaywalking Shelved by District's Heads

The District Commissioners have shelved indefinitely the proposal of Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer to place a special curb on pedestrians as recommended by a Congressional sub-committee last spring, it was learned yesterday.

Acting upon an opinion written by Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal, the Commisisoners rejected a proposal that a new traffic regulation be adopted to read: "No pedestrian shall disobey instructions of a police officer."

Melvin C. Hazen, president of the Board of Commissioners, who had previously favored the regulation, said that Seal had pointed out that a policeman now has authority to make pedestrians obey the present traffic restrictions.

Seal, in his opinion, stated that the Van Duzer proposal was "uncertain, indefinite, and we question its reasonableness."

He also expressed the belief that it might even restrict the present authority of police to control pedestrian traffic, as it was admittedly designed to curb jaywalkers at intersectoins where "walk" lights have been installed.

This is the second time that the corporation counsel has blocked efforts of the traffic director to ban jaywalking. E. Barrett Prettyman, who resigned last spring, was even more emphatic in his denuneiation of a previous recommendation.

J. M. Hepbron Heads Work Of Crime Unit

D. C. Justice Association Names Expert Pending Permanent Set-up.

He Will Address D. C. Soroptimist Club Luncheon Today.

The executive committee of the Washington Criminal Justice Association yesterday announced the appointment of James M. Hepbron, authority in this country on crime and crime prevention, as acting director of the association until a permanent personnel may be selected and appointed.

Hepbron, who is managing director of the Baltimore Criminal Justice Commission, also is the director of the Community Fund of Baltimore. He has been identified with the Baltimore commission since 1922—as assistant director from 1922 to 1925, and as managing director since 1925.

Under his direction the Criminal Justice Commission has worked, in co-operation with the local civil authorities, to reduce crime and to speed criminal justice in the Maryland city.

Accomplishments of the Baltimore commission have been cited in all parts of the country as an example of results that may be obtained from such an organization, backed by civic interests and administered under expert supervision.

Held Other Posts.

In the course of his career in Baltimore, Hepbron has served as a member of the organization committee of the Attorney General's conference on crime, which was held in Washington in the winter of 1934, and has acted as special consultant to the Pennsylvania State Crime Commission and to the Philadelphia Criminal Justice Commission.

When a speical grand jury, impanneled in New York several months ago, recommended the establishment of a civic criminal justice organization in that city, Mayor LaGuardia requested Harry F. Guggenheim to head such a commission. Hepbron has been aske dto assist, as consultant, in its formation.

The Washington Criminal Justice Association engaged his services in a similar capacity last June and, since that time, with the exception of a short journey abroad to study prison practices in France and Spain, he has been actively at work in setting up a temporary local organization to study and report on various phases of District crime, crime prevention and the speed of criminal justice.

Temporary headquarters were established in Washington June 5, a skeleton staff was engaged and work under supervision of Hepbron and his assistant, Wallace C. Reidt, has been proceeding since that time. Preliminary reports on the findings of the association, which are being obtained by the staff with the cooperation of Washington civil authorities of the Police Department and the District attorney's office, will be made public shortly.

Address to Be Broadcast.

Hepbron is scheduled to speak, during the next two weeks, before several local citizens' groups and service organizations. The first in his series of talks on the purposes and possible accomplishments of a civic criminal justice association will be given before a special luncheon meeting of the Soroptimist Club of Washington in the small ballroom of the Willard Hotel at 1 o'clock today. Proceedings of the luncheon will be broadcast over WJSV of the Columbia Broadcasting System between 1 p. m. and 2 p. m.

Organization of the Washington Criminal Justice Association followed a public dinner at the Mayflower Hotel in January of this year. The dinner, attended by 450 citizens, representing various District organizations, service, civic, school and government groups, heard three authorities on crime and criminal justice speak on benefits of a civic crime commission. The speakers were Newton D. Baker, president of the Cleveland Association for Criminal Justice; Justin Miller, chairman of Attorney General Cummings' Advisory Committee on Crime, and Hepbron.

After the dinner the audience urged formation of a civic criminal justice association in Washington, requesting that the committee of

800,000 Nazis Open Rally at Nurnberg

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Sept. 8.—Ominous warnings that "the specter of war is approaching nearer and nearer," resounded in the Soviet Press tonight as the Red Army marched midway between Berlin and Moscow in maneuvers along the Polish frontier.

The German city of Nurnberg tonight was plastered with placards terming bolshevism "World Enemy No. 1." Hundreds of thousands of Nazis were assembled in the city for their annual party convention.)

While two of the three army divisions in underground chambers at Minsk were working out frontier strategy, the Moscow press boasted the Soviets were able to protect the fatherland.

The Pravda said:

"The ominous specter of war is approaching nearer and nearer. The danger is too real for one to confine it to resolutions and oral demonstrations. One must fight actively for peace."

Citizens Take Part.

The real problems of the army maneuvers were begun tonight at the same time as residents of cities throughout the Ukraine took part in chemical air defense maneuvers.

M. Goloded, chairman of the council of peoples' commissars in "white Russia," speaking before Marshal Klementi E. Voroshiloff, commissar of war and navy, said at Minsk:

"We want Voroshiloff to inform the commissars and Stalin that white Russia, which formerly was an oppressed region of Russian czarism, has now been converted into the best of republics with Socialist labor. We assure them that the frontiers of our republic are firmly locked and the keys to that lock we hand to Stalin and Voroshiloff. Only according to their orders shall we open our frontier."

Hitler Boasts of Strength.

His assertion was contained in a three-minute speech to hundreds of thousands of cheering Nazis gathered in Nurnberg for their annual party convention.

Everywhere were placards terming bolshevism "world enemy No. 1," as Hitler worked over his first important speech scheduled to be delivered at 8 p. m. Wednesday (2 p. m. Eastern standard time). Its subject would be "Culture."

Sovereignty Restored.

Said Hitler today, during brief ceremonies at the City Hall, where he was presented with a four-century-old drawing of Nurnberg:

"This gift, with its plans for the city's ramparts and defenses, reminds me of this most difficult period in my life—when, in the past year, I restored full arms sovereignty to the nation."

Rendering the Versailles Treaty obsolete, he has remilitarized the Rhineland and increased Germany's army since the last convention

It was estimated 800,000 Nazis were in Nurnberg tonight.

Roosevelt Leading On First Return In Maryland Poll

Baltimore, Sept. 8 (AP).—First returns today from a Presidential poll conducted in Maryland by the Baltimore Sunpapers, independent Democratic newspapers, gave President Roosevelt 1,811 votes and Gov. Alf M. Landon 1,366.

The Sunpapers announced ballots are being sent by mail to all of Maryland's 771,127 registered voters.

Today's returns came from 23 counties. Baltimore, containing approximately one-half the State's population, was not included.

In Washington County Landon had a slight lead, 140 to 137.

Prince Georges County, on the other hand, went for the President, 63 to 60.

Other counties giving the Republican candidate the advantage were: Carroll, 92 to 85; Cecil, 30 to 29, and Talbot, 42 to 22.

The remaining 17 counties reporting each gave Roosevelt a majority, with the exception of Harford, where the vote was tied, 74 to 74.

U. S. Scientist Escapes Soldiers in Liberia

Monrovia, Liberia, Sept. 8 (U.P.).—Government news organs reported today that Dr. Robert Morey, Harvard University scientist, escaped from the country when soldiers were sent to arrest him on charges of violating sacred traditions of the natives. Morey had been making an anthropological study of the country.

Developments in Spanish Rebellion And Other Significant Events Abroad

Spanish rebel forces fought their way into the suburbs of San Sebastian. Defenders in the panic-stricken city fought among themselves.

Socialist Premier Blum of France was reported considering a special session of Parliament to cope with Communist demands for support of the Madrid regime. Violence broke out in the wave of strikes called by Spanish loyalist sympathizers.

Gen. Francisco Franco, Spanish rebel leader, admitted to the United States that the airplane which attempted to bomb the Destroyer Kane may have belonged to the rebel forces. He said that if a rebel plane did make the attack it was through error.

Six hundred priests and nuns have been slain by anarchists in San Sebastian in the last six weeks, nine Spanish priests, who escaped into France in disguise, revealed.

The Soviet press warned of approaching conflict while the Russian army marched in war games along the Polish frontier — the warnings inspired by the German Nazi gathering in Nurnberg where Bolshevism was referred to as "World Enemy No. 1."

Portugal quickly nipped a rebellion of crews of two neval vessels in the Tagus River Harbor off Lisbon. The capital was reported calm.

9 in Crews Die, Portugal Quells 2 Ship Revolts

By the Associated Press.

Lisbon, Portugal, Sept. 8.—The government clamped military control on Lisbon tonight after quickly putting down revolts on two naval vessels in the Tagus River harbor off Lisbon.

The capital itself was calm as was the countryside, reports said.

Six mutinous members of the crews were killed and nine injured before the government, by prompt action, disabled the vessels and beached them. Arresting their crews.

The revolts occurred on the destroyer Dao and the sloop Alfonso de Albuquerque.

As soon as those on shore were aware of the mutinies, the government land batteries Altodúque and Almada trained their guns on the ships, speedily disabling the ships and pounding the crews into submission.

Towed to shore, the crews were jailed as authorities worked to learn whether the mutinies had any far-reaching ramifications.

Rigid censorship delayed complete reports on the rebellion and whether the incidents were connected with the civil war in neighboring Spain.

(The Madrid government has accused Portugal of aiding the Spanish Fascist rebels. And Lisbon tonight had not yet unconditionally accepted a place on the neutrality body scheduled to sit in London Wednesday.)

Extraordinary precautions were taken by the government in Lisbon as the sound of the firing died away.

Both the war vessels concerned carried four 4.7-inch guns. The Doa displaces 1,620 tons and the sloop 2,425 tons.

Strong guards were placed around all ministries in Lisbon.

Witnessing the bombardments were the British steamers Asturias and Strathmore, carrying several hundred British holiday makers. So far as could be learned tonight, neither British vessel had been endangered by the shelling.

Foreign Reds Blamed.

Boston, Sept. 8 (AP).—Portugal's minister in Washington, Dr. Joao Antonio de Binachi, through the consulate of Portugal here, tonight attributed to "foreign Communists" today's abortive attempt by sailors to seize two warships off Lisbon. The minister is at Magnolia recuperating from a recent illness.

Strikers Routed In Paris Battle; 20 Are Injured

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Sept. 8.—A score of persons were injured today in a three-cornered battle between Leftists, Rightists and policemen, as 2,000 striking workers finally were driven from the prefecture at Clermont-Ferrand.

With thousands of Leftists screaming threats the Rightist workers, who said they would occupy buildings until the government ousted strikers from the Michelin Tire Factories, walked out guarded by gandarmes.

The crowd broke through police lines, and 20 were injured before the fighting was quelled.

The crowd roared the "Internationale" and shook clenched fists at the building. Inside the prefecture, the Rightists sang "The Marseillaise" and shouted "Long live France!"

Blum Considers Action.

Adamant Communist demands for French support of the Madrid Socialist government against the Spanish rebellion, informed sources said tonight, has created such a menacing problem that Leon Blum is considering summoning an extraordinary session of Parliament.

Because of the spreading wave of strikes, authoritative sources said, Blum is being forced to a show-down between the elements demanding France abandon its course of nonintervention in Spain and those backing his "hands off" policy.

He may do it, they said, by hastily summoning Parliament and asking for a vote of confidence.

Rightist quarters maintained that failure of the government to act would be tantamount to an admission there were two powers in France—one constitutionally established and the other self-constituted and attempting to dictate to the government.

Premier Is Warned.

Senator Henry Lemery, former minister of justice in the Doumerge regime, sent Blum a letter describing yesterday's one-hour strike of sympathy for the Madrid government as "insurrectional" and warning the premier of dire consequences should such demonstrations be uncontrolled.

"We cannot permit certain persons to impose on the government decisions amounting virtually to

Princess Juliana, Royal Heiress Of Netherlands, to Wed German

By the Associated Press.

The Hague, The Netherlands, Sept. 8.—Buxom, fun-loving Juliana, heiress to the throne of The Netherlands, and the German Prince Bernhard Zu-Lippe-Biesterfeld are to be Europe's next royal bridal pair.

Their engagement, as unexpected as it was joyously received by the populace, was announced today. There was no date set for the ceremonies.

The princess is the 27-year-old daughter of Queen Wilhelmina and two years older than her betrothed prince-consort.

The tall Bernhard—whom his friends call Benno—has a job at present. But it was said tonight he probably would give up commerce once he became consort of the future queen.

Said Prince "Benno's" mother:

"Nowadays everyone must work—even princes," explaining that her son was still employed in a German dye trust.

The prince's full name is:

Bernhard Leopold Frederick Eberhard Pules Curt Charles Godfrey Peter. His bride-to-be is formally named the Princess Juliana Louise Emma Marie Wilhelmina.

It is believed the prince will add to his name the title "Prince Consort of The Netherlands" after he is wed.

Under a proposed constitutional amendment the prince would receive 200,000 florins (about $136,000) a year for being prince consort. The sum would be deducted from the funds now appropriated for the reigning Queen Wilhelmina, who at 56 has denied rumors that she might abdicate and leave the throne to the young people.

Tonight enthusiastic crowds lined the streets and waved greetings to the princess, who motored to The Hague from Sgraveland with the prince at the wheel.

Defenders Battle Among Themselves

By the United Press.

San Sebastian, Spain, Sept. 8.—Rebel troops stormed into the outskirts of San Sebastian tonight and battled to capture the city in time to save it from destruction by anarchists, determined to explode dynamite mines and set gasoline fires in the villas and hotels of Spain's summer capital.

Ships Speed to Nationals.

Inhabitants and defenders were shut off from all escape except by sea or to Bilbao, where already there is not enough food for the loyalists in control there.

The U. S. S. Kane, destroyer which last week was bombed by a Spanish plane, rushed to San Sebastian from St. Jean du Luze, France. Other foreign warships were en route to rescue endangered nationalists.

Outside the city the suburbs of Frncheppe and Pasajes, deep-water port for San Sebastian, were ablaze. A state of siege was proclaimed in San Sebastian, but the street fighting continued.

Populace in Panic.

Encircled by Carlist monarchists, fierce Moorish warriors and Spanish legionnaires, the beleaguered city was in panic.

The populace, attempting to flee in small boats to the safety of French soil, was terror-stricken by the flames devouring Pasajes, deep-water port for San Sebastian, and Trincheppe, fortified strong point where loyalists had planned a last ditch fight. But rather than face the rebel fire the anarchists set dynamite mines.

Explosions roared in Pasajes throughout the night. Hundreds of loyalist militiamen moved under cover of darkness from Pasajes to San Sebastian, leaving the fishing port wide open.

Rebels, meanwhile, surrounded Renteria, the industrial community of 10,000 inhabitants at the end of Pasajes Bay. Renteria is a center of Spanish communism.

Surrender Offer Rejected.

St. Jean de Luz, France, Sept. 8 (AP).—Spanish rebel leader today spurned a surrender offer made by the son of the governor of San Sebastian.

The offer of conditional surrender was made by Jose Ortega, who declared he was acting as emissary for Gov. Antonio Ortega of San Sebastion, his father.

The offer, it was admitted, was made without the knowledge of the anarchists, who were swearing they would burn the city and die within it rather than give up to the Fascists.

The surrender offer was made

Couple May Quit Baby Will Contest In Face of Threats

Toronto, Sept. 8 (Canadian Press), Gus Graziano tonight said he and his wife might forego their claim that their nine children made them eligible for the $500,000 Millar "baby will" contest, because of anonymous threats against the children.

Three letters have been received warning their children will be kidnaped on the way to school unless they withdraw from the contest, he declared.

"I think more of my children than of any amount of money," he said.

Graziano has asked for police protection and takes his five youngsters of school age to and from school four times a day.

Threats against the Grazianos are the second reported over the Millar will marathon. Mrs. Grace Sagnato, said she was warned she would never touch any of the prize money unless she settled with "certain parties."

Muse, Virginia Party Leader, Backs Landon

By the Associated Press.

Petersburg, Va., Sept. 8.—State Senator Benjamin Muse, Democrat and champion of old-age pensions and social legislation, today announced his support of the Republican Presidential nominee, Alf M. Landon, in a written statement which drew the immediate fire of Horace Edwards, headquarters director for the Virginia Democrats.

"I have decided with great sadness that I cannot vote for re-election of President Roosevelt," Senator Muse said. "I feel I cannot do so in true loyalty to the prinicples of the Democratic Party."

Edwards, asserting that in midcampaign Senator Muse "has deserted the party in the presence of the enemy," said "we cannot understand by what process of mental gymnastics a Virginian can vote for a life-long Republican and still call himself a Democrat."

Fooling Self, Says Edwards.

"He certainly is fooling himself as to the traditions of the Democratic Party in this State upon whom our people have depended for nearly a century," Edwards continued.

"Moreover, he does not represent the views of his own constituency, which now is enthusiastically organizing for Roosevelt."

Senator Muse, in a lengthy statement issued from his home here, said "the paramount issue in this contest, as I see it, is whether or not we wish to continue our advance on a sound basis and without undermining the institutions of free government."

Opposed by Chairman.

S. B. Barham, jr., chairman of the Fourth District Democratic committee, also replied to the Petersburg Senator by saying the district was "well organized and enthusiastic, and we are going to give Mr. Roosevelt a tremendous majority."

Barham said he could not understand how a man elected to the State Senate by the Democratic Party could fail to support a candidate for President "nominated unanimously by the party."

He added that Muse actively participated in the State convention that chose delegates to the national convention.

Grand Jury Studies Subpena Evasion

Refusal of six officials and employes of the Railway Audit & Inspection Co., Inc., to obey subpenas of the LaFollette committee investigating alleged labor espionage in industry was investigated by the District grand jury yesterday at the behest of United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett.

The six were cited by the LaFollette committee following their failure to appear for questioning. Those named in the citation, which is the first of its kind, were W. W. Groves, president of the company; W. Boone Groves, L. Douglas Rice, J. C. Boyer, James E. Blair and Robert S. Judge.

Charles Murray, assistant United States attorney in charge of the investigation, intimated the Government would seek individual reports by the grand jury so that each of the six, if indicted, would be tried separately On the other hand, he said, some might be found innocent of any charges and could thus be freed of the possibility of trial.

Witnesses who went before the grand jury yesterday were John J. Abt, counsel for the Senate committee, and Robert P. Wohlforth, its secretary. A report by the grand jury is expected next Wednesday.

Judge Scores Parking Privileges of Carriers

Cincinnati, Sept. 8 (AP).—The ordinary citizen won a decision today from Presiding Judge Samuel W. Bell, 23 years on the municipal bench.

He dismissed a dozen motorists charged with parking their automobiles in spaces reserved for taxicabs, buses and street car loading, asserting "citizens have an equal right with these companies."

Judge Bell has opposed granting special stopping and parking privileges to taxicabs and buses. He contends that parking ordinances are illegal except when they affect the entire population, such as designating one-way thoroughfares and prohibiting all parking.

"If everyone has an equal right to use the streets, then everyone has an equal right to park on them," he said.

Italian Toll in Africa.

Rome, Sept. 8 (AP).—Casualties during August among Italian troops policing conquered Ethiopia amounted to 216, it was announced today. Twenty-seven soldiers were killed during that period, while 189 more died of sickness and other causes. Official figures on fighting losses since the Italian army invaded Ethiopia October 3, 1935, were set at 2,991 Italian soldier dead.

Politics and People

By Franklyn Waltman

A RECURRENCE of the wave of pessimism which gripped the Republicans last spring again seems to have laid hold of them — while Democratic spirits, somewhat depressed for a few weeks after the nomination of Gov. Alf M. Landon for the Presidency, again have become buoyant and care-free, if not actually cocky.

WALTMAN.

In many places, local Republican leaders privately confide their belief that their party's campaign is going badly and that President Roosevelt again has snatched up the ball and is running hell-bent down the field for another touchdown. On the other hand, the President's radiant confidence has been contagious and has inspired many of his followers to believe that he is headed toward a victory as great, if not greater, than four years ago.

For several practical reasons too much reliance should not be placed in such manifestations of the reaction of party workers to the campaign so far. These spells of despondency, alternaitng with exuberant hopefulness, have affected both Democrats and Republicans with such rapidity this summer as to make them worthless as political barometers. In another month the Democrats may be in a case of jitters, with the Republicans exuding hope.

It may be that President Roosevelt will be re-elected—perhaps by a landslide in the electoral vote. But to make such a prediction this early in the campaign is only to indulge in a guessing contest. The guess might be right, but it cannot be sustained with logical reasons until the crystallization of several very important factors underlying this year's Presidential election.

* * *

In many States the prospects of the national party tickets may be helped or impaired by local party situations. And in many States these local tickets have not yet been chosen. A good example is New York, where the Republicans do not choose a gubernatorial candidate until the end of this month. Neither do the Democrats, for that matter, but they already know that Gov. Herbert H. Lehmann will be renominated.

Should New York Republicans engage in a free-for-all fight over a gubernatorial nominee with bitterness and acrimony and a further demoralization in their ranks the effect undoubtedly would be to lessen Gov. Landon's prospects in that highly-important State. Even if such a tussle is avoided, the selection of a reactionary candidate would supply the Democrats with ammunition against the entire Republican ticket and thus weigh down Gov. Landon.

Jumping half-way across the country the same situation exists in Nebraska, where the Democratic Party is split three ways, one faction flatly refusing to have anything whatever to do with Terry Carpenter, nominated in a Democratic primary for Senator. Whether Senator George W. Norris makes the race as an Independent for re-election will have an important bearing on the outcome there. Still other illustrations would be cited, but these suffice to demonstrate the importance of local situations which have not yet crystallized.

* * *

A good part of the Republican pessimism in recent days has resulted from the lumbering, creaking and almost chaotic functioning of the party headquarters at Chicago and the apparent confusion in the management of Gov. Landon's first campaign trip.

Republican leaders from some States, accustomed to find experienced veterans in charge at the headquarters—with each agency geared—in harmony with each other—have been amazed at the lack of organization, the jealousies, cross-currents and lack of direction which they have found at the Chicago headquarters.

If this situation should continue until election day their worst fears might be justified. But it is unlikely to continue. Already Republican Chairman John Hamilton has revised the original organization plan, tightened up the loose bolts and bars—and if this does not eliminate the discordant sounds and cross-purposes, he proposes to undertake another reorganization.

In view of the fact that the Republican Party is being rebuilt—that younger leaders, without great experience in national politics, have taken hold of it, the situation that has existed might have been expected. It is a handicap against which the Republicans must struggle—but it is not necessarily fatal to their cause.

The same thing is true of the management of the Landon personal campaign. The Kansan is without experience in national campaigning, whereas the ease and grace of President Roosevelt result from more than 20 years of close contact with the national political scene—thrice in the role of candidate on a national ticket.

But there is nothing stupid about Gov. Landon or Chairman Hamilton. They appear to be learning fast. The Landon campaign tour into the East last month actually was a shakedown trip to reveal the loose bolts and springs and to test the worth of some of the advice which had been showered on him.

His sudden and unexpected decision to make a fighting speech in Maine to ring down the curtain on the Republican State campaign there, is an indication that he has just started to fight. Since all signs point to a Republican victory in the Maine election—it is doubtful whether the Democrats can even snatch a Brann from the burning—this was a smart move psychologically of the type of smartness needed just now.

Women Envoys To Power Rally Describe Work

about electricity, but her chief interest, since her husband first founded his great plant, has been its women workers.

They used to come to work in clogs or sabots, the Manchester version of wooden shoes, and wearing shawls. Mrs. de Ferranti changed all that. There are from 3,000 to 4,000 girls now working in her plant, which is managed by her son Vincent now, and they have cloak rooms and good clothes and fine dining rooms, and even a theater in which they present plays. She does not know how much in wages the girls get, she said.

Miss Haslett once worked in a boiler factory. She was educated as an engineer, although she doesn't call her self one, "because I've too much respect for the word."

She is a commander of the Royal Order of the British Empire and a member or president or director of a score of councils and clubs and committees and associations.

Most of them have to do with the welfare of women, as she considers herself "a bit of a feminist," but her guiding interest is in labor-saving for women through electricity. After numerous bleak years of steady struggle against great odds of public apathy and lack of financial support, she has convinced the British, government and public alike that the women of England never shall be slaves to domestic drudgery. She is now handsomely supported, and has passed nearly 1,000 women through her schools (70 branches throughout England) which train them for the teaching of the use of electricity in housecraft.

Her pupils go all over England showing housewives the benefits of electrification. So rapid is the advance that there is something like a power boom on in the isles.

Foe of Hoover Named to Head Secret Service

Murphy, 'Exiled' in Spying on G-Men, Recalled and Promoted.

Morgenthau said it is not a permanent assignment. Before he ordered Murphy back to Washington he consulted Attorney General Homer J. Cummings, who had backed up Hoover in the recent "jealous" row between operatives of the two agencies. He said Cummings consented to Murphy's return.

Least spectacular of the numerous Government undercover agencies, the Secret Service is charged with the important job of "detection, prevention and investigation of frauds on the currency; enforcement of the counterfeiting laws, and protection of the President." In a campaign year, the White House detail always is of transcendant importance. Murphy is a former Presidential guard.

The recent conflict between Moran's Secret Service and Hoover's Federal Bureau of Investigation was believed to have had its origin in reports that Federal police agencies might be consolidated at some future date under Hoover, and resulting "jealousies."

Murphy, while acting in charge of the bureau, had permitted Grady L. Boatwright, of the St. Paul Secret Service office, to investigate reports that Hoover's "G-Men" had been too free with their guns in a recent hoodlum slaying.

"Disciplinary" Action.

Attorney General Cummings got squarely behind the Federal Bureau of Investigation in the row. In the end, Secretary Morgenthau took "disciplinary" action against both Murphy and Boatwright for going afield from their Secret Service duties. Each was reduced in rank. Murphy was ordered to the Pacific Coast.

It later developed that Murphy's assignment really was a major one, as he would head the first independent district office of the Secret Service. Formerly the organization operated on a regional basis, with operatives in charge located in the principal cities. Reports recently had been current that Murphy would return to Washington after necessary "atonement."

Yesterday Treasury officals let it be known that Murphy will be in virtual charge of the Secret Service until after the November elections, when he may return to the Coast.

Meantime, he will co-operate with Wilson, who becomes acting assistant chief of the bureau.

Wilson, as a member of the Internal Revenue Bureau's intelligence unit, took a prominent part in both the Al Capone tax investigation and the Lindbergh kidnaping case.

While detailed to Chicago in 1930 and 1931, he took charge of the Government's income tax drive involving Capone and his associates. It was Wilson's deciphering of impounded Capone bookkeeping records that enabled the Government to connect Capone with various underworld activities. It was his work that was largely responsible for sending the gangland leader to jail for 11 years.

Helped Lindbergh Hunt.

Wilson and some of his associates were assigned to the Lindbergh case a few days after the baby was kidnaped in March, 1932. Personal letters from Col. Lindbergh, expressing appreciation for his assistance, are among his prized possessions.

Wilon has been identified with the Revenue Bureau unit since August 3, 1920, except for a period of six months when he was engaged in private business in Florida. Since June 1, 1934, he has been special agent in charge of the Cleveland division, comprising Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky.

Officials recently have disparaged reports that the Administration, if returned to power, will consolidate its many investigative agencies into one strong unit.

But there is continued talk of merging the several Treasury undercover bureaus. A bill was introduced in Congress last session for this purpose, but failed of passage. Appointment of an Internal Revenue Bureau man to the responsible Secret Service post yesterday revived speculation on renewal of this effort next session.

It is known that representatives of the six Treasury units are meeting at weekly conferences. Plans are being discussed to draw manpower from one bureau to another, and for strengthening co-operative work between the Treasury agencies.

Morgenthau technically is in charge of all of the Treasury intelligence branches.

The Political Arena

By the Associated Press.

Results in the primaries to date indicate slight chance for the Townsend Plan to make much progress through the major parties in the coming session of Congress.

Excluding the balloting in several States yesterday, nominations have been made for 334 of the 435 seats in the House. Of the more than 600 Democratic and Republican candidates, less than 50 bore Townsend indorsement in seeking nomination. These were about equally divided between the two major parties.

In numerous States, where reverses have been their lot in the primaries, however, supporters of the $200-monthly-pension proposal have announced independent candidacies.

With 36 Senate seats being filled this year, major party nominees recorded as favorable to Townsend are few. They include Terry Carpenter, Nebraska Democrat; Willis Mahoney, Oregon Democrat, and C. O. Andrews and Claude Pepper, Florida Democrats, named to fill out the unexpired terms of the late Senators Trammel and Fletcher. Ernest Lundeen, Farmer-Labor candidate for the Senate in Minnesota, is expected to have Townsend backing.

Dover, Del., Sept. 8 (AP).—Independent Republicans placed a third party ticket in the field at a State convention today, but indicated their support of the national organization.

Former U. S. Representative Robert G. Houston was chairman of the convention which nominated I. Dolphus Short, of Hilford, for Governor.

Salina, Kans., Sept. 8 (AP).—Walter A. Huxman, Democratic nominee for Governor, tonight said that under the administration of Gov. Alf M. Landon Kansas has spent "not a penny" for relief and added that if present policies are continued counties "will be bankrupted."

In a campaign opening speech before a State-wide Democratic rally, Huxman scored the Landon administration record on relief, State prohibition, which he asserted is being "nullified," and schools, which he declared faced "serious" financial problems.

"I am informed that Kansas ranks forty-eighth in State aid given to elementary schools," he said, adding that more than 400 schools are not operating but sending their children to other districts; that a dozen cities and more than 100 rural districts are without funds and that about 3,500 rural teachers are paid less than $38 a month on a 12-month basis.

New York, Sept. 8 (AP).—A move to swing the following of Maj. A. Divine, a Harlem religious group leader, to the Lemke-O'Brien Union Party ticket was made known here tonight by Thomas W. Myles, Los Angeles, youthful colored director of the colored voters' division of the Union Party.

Myles said at a press conference that he and Divine, who is known to his followers as Father Divine, had a "private talk" today and expressed confidence Divine would be "entirely satisfied" and would take the platform at a Harlem meeting tomorrow night.

Myles said "at least 400,000 in Harlem and a million in the United States are waiting to be advised by him on how to vote."

Quincy, Ill., Sept. 8 (AP).—Representative Lemke, Union Party candidate for President, said in a speech here tonight that cost of crop production could be guaranteed through "strengthening of the commodity exchange act" and establishment of Federal and State warehouses for agricultural products.

The Union Party's platform, he said, called for legislation assuring "cost of production plus a reasonable profit for the farmer." He spoke at the convention of the Illinois Farmers Union.

New York, Sept. 8 (AP).—Mrs. Blair Banister, Assistant Treasurer of the United States and sister of Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, tonight said the balanced budget issue of the campaign is "bothering only those who are worried for political reasons."

Speaking on a Nation-wide broadcast sponsored by the Democratic National Committee, Mrs. Banister said:

"Certainly the people who buy Government bonds are not worried. The Government's credit was never stronger than it is today. The fact is that the policy of spending to promote recovery has succeeded and everybody knows it."

Baltimore, Sept. 8.—A group of Baltimore women launched a Landon-Knox campaign organization today, having as honorary chairman Mrs. William Cabell Bruce, wife of the former Democratic Senator Bruce, who already had announced he would not vote for Roosevelt.

Mrs. Robert O. Bonnell, member of the executive committee, issued a "statement of pirnciples," beginning:

"We feel that because of the vital importance of this coming Presidential election, the safety of the Nation must be put above party allegiance."

Other officers are Mrs. Harry R. Slack, chairman; Mrs. Edward H. McKoon and Mrs. C. Baker Clotworthy, vice chairmen; Mrs. Gideon Stieff, secretary, and Mrs. Arthur Levering and Mrs. W. Fairfield Peterson, in charge of finances.

Philadelphia, Sept. 8 (AP).—Dr. Luther A. Harr, Pennsylvania secretary of banking, cited a possible violation of State law today in demanding that Col. Frank Knox, Republican Vice Presidential nominee, retract a statement concerning the safety of bank deposits or supply data in support of it.

Dr. Harr said Knox was quoted as saying in Allentown, Pa., last Saturday:

Harr said a Pennsylvania act, as amended in 1931, makes it a "punishable misdemeanor to utter, circulate, to transmit false or derogatory statements affecting the standing of any bank or financial institution operating in this Commonwealth."

'May Be Guilty' Of Kane Attack, Rebels Tell U. S.

Franco Admits Possibility in Note, Expresses His Regret in Incident.

Gen. Francisco Franco, Spanish rebel leader, has admitted, according to messages transmitted to the State Department yesterday, that the plane which attempted to bomb the United States destroyer Kane August 30 may have belonged to rebel forces.

The message was sent by Charles Bay, American consul at Seville, earlier in the day a message from the Spanish undersecretary of state flatly denied government responsibility for the attack. Previously, in conversation with Eric C. Wendelin, in charge of the United States Embassy at Madrid, the undersecretary had made a similar denial.

While admitting that a rebel plane, through error, may have dropped nine bombs around the American destroyer, Gen. Franco declared such an attack "was repugnant to the standards and conduct" of the rebel forces.

Meanwhile, Don Luis Calderon, who has resigned as Spanish Ambassador to Washington, called at the State Department and informed Secretary Hull of his resignation. He quit because of inability to cooperate with the new Spanish government.

Message From Bay.

The message from Consul Bay, transmitting the explanation of Gen. Franco, said:

"Gen. Franco stated that, as the result of investigation made, he has no information that any plane belonging to his forces has committed an act of aggression against any destroyer of another nation, but since his forces have carried out definite aerial attacks against the squadron of the Spanish government, the possibility of an error of such deplorable consequences can not be excluded.'

"Gen. Franco added that in regard to the responsibility that attaches to the aerial forces under his command, he hastened to make known to Consul Bay, with the request that it be communicated to the American Government, the regret which this incident has caused him—an incident which he characterized as repugnant to the standards and conduct of his forces which respect and uphold lawful procedure."

Loyalists' Note.

"In reply to your very kind note of August 31, regarding the bombing of the destroyer Kane of the American Navy by a three-motor, low-winged plane, approximately 38 miles from the Spanish coast and in 36 degrees 33 minutes north latitude and 7 degrees 37 minutes west longitude, when it was proceeding from Gibraltar to Bilbao to assist in the evacuation of American citizens, a note whose language the Government of the Republic has fully appreciated, I hasten to confirm by this note the telephone conversation which the undersecretary of this department had with you yesterday and give you the most absolute assurances on the day on which this disagreeable incident took place, that is to say, the 30th of August, no plane of the Government of the Republic was operating in the said area and furthermore that the aviation corps of the Government of the Republic has no machines of this type. This does not prevent the Government of the Republic from deploring the incident."

Civic Units Meet On Health Plans

Civic organizations interested in public health problems yesterday held a caucus in the office of Health Officer George C. Ruhland to prepare for the public District budget hearing which opens tomorrow morning in the board room of the District Building.

Mrs. John A. Boyle, jr., chairman of the Consumers' Council, said she expressed the attitude of the organizations after the meeting, when she asserted: "We're behind the whole program."

The health department's budget for 1938 is $1,117,492, as compared with a current appropriation of $507,970. Included in the requests is an item of $500,000 to build two public health centers.

Besides the Consumers' Council, organizations represented at the parley included the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, the District Medical Society, the District Dental Society and the Washington Chirurgical Society.

Rev. O'Connor Cites Values of Religion

For development of right motives, we must look to religion, declared the Rev. John J. O'Connor, former District representative of the National Conference of Jews and Christians, in a radio talk here last night.

Father O'Connor, now professor of history at St. John's University, Brooklyn, gave his talk under sponsorship of the Committee on Moral and Religious Training of Washington. The committee is an inter-faith organization to promote moral and religious training of children attending public schools less than college grade in the United States.

contingent upon rebel leaders' promises to grant amnesty to the defenders and not to destroy Spain's popular watering resort. Otherwise, it was made plain, the city's defenders could not promise that hundreds of hostages would not be executed with each advance of the rebel columns.

Great Battle Raging.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Lisbon, Portugal, Sept. 8.—The two greatest armies massed in Spain's civil war were locked in battle tonight along a 15-mile front east of Talavera de la Reina.

Bitter fighting raged in trenches filled with corpses and on plains littered with wounded men. While the titanic struggle of the rebels to break through to the relief of 1,700 insurgents facing death in the crumbling Alcazar at Toledo went on, towns surrounding San Sebastian on the northwest front were set aflame by anarchists.

Dispatches from the Talavera front reported loyalists claims that in one engagement the desperate defenders of Madrid killed 700 rebels, including Moors, Fascists, revolting regulars and Spanish Foreign Legionnaires. Wave after wave of raw, meagerly drilled loyal militiamen were sent into action to assault rebel positions.

French Patrol Border.

Hendaye, France, Sept. 8 (AP).—A squadron of six French seaplanes was ordered tonight to patrol the Franco-Spanish border after Spanish government planes bombarding Irun and Fuenstarrabia had dropped a projectile on the Hendaye Beach.

French authorities said the air patrol was ordered "to warn away" both Spanish rebel and government planes should they circle over French territory.

Three Spanish government planes tonight bombarded rebel territory near Irun and Fuentarrabia three times, but bad marksmanship sent most of the projectiles into the Bidassoa River, which is the boundary line, or into empty fields.

Gen. Tracy Is Shifted To Command on Coast

Brig. Gen. Joseph P. Tracy has been transferred from the command of the Coast Artillery School at Fort Monroe, Va., to command of the Ninth Coast Artillery District at San Francisco, Calif., the War Department announced yesterday. The transfer will become effective in December.

Brig. Gen. John W. Gullek, former chief of Coast Artillery and now on duty in the Philippines, will succeed Gen. Treay at Fort Monroe, it was announced.

peace or war without even taking into account the existence of Parliament," he wrote.

Lemery demanded to know what action Blum planned to thwart the continued spread of the strikes. He called to Blum's attention "rumors that the workers intend hereafter not to just suspend work but to take five-day possession of factories, detain managers and attempt to operate the seized plants by Soviet methods."

The conservative newspaper, L'Intransigeant expressed alarm, commenting "there cannot be two powers in France. It is time to return to rule by the government which is responsible to Parliament and to Parliament alone."

General Strike Gains.

A general strike of metallurgists in Marseilles, meanwhile, appeared to be gaining rapidly in numbers. Early reports said workers in munition and metal plants, automobile and airplane factories, steel box plants and machine shops took possession of their premises and demanded a new, effective collective contract.

Later dispatches said machine shop workers had decided to join the movement. Delegates representing both employers and workers met at the police prefecture in an effort to reach a settlement.

At Amiens 2,600 clothing workers struck when employers demanded cessation of all trade union agitation and in Paris 225,000 metal workers, aroused by the government's Spanish policy, demanded enforcement of collective contracts and other social legislation enacted by parliament last spring.

The general confederation of labor called a meeting of its executive committee to decide tonight how to press its campaign for "guns and planes" for Spain.

Missing Infant Search Extended

Detroit, Sept. 8 (AP).—Search for 20-month-old Harry Browe, who disappeared Saturday from Clark Park, after he had been taken there for an airing by two brothers, was extended tonight to adjoining States and Canada.

Police ordered 10,000 circulars printed and distributed. Rewards totaling $350 were posted by members of the child's family and the Wayne County board of auditors.

Investigators said they expected the Federal Bureau of Investigation to begin observation of the case tomorrow.

Two women and a man were sought tonight, police said. They were described by the two brothers, Charles, 8, and Edward, 7.

President Jests With Pressmen, Leaves on Trip

Roosevelt Parries Quips on Politics, Takes Train to Knoxville.

Off on another cross-country trip, the President in a jocund mood yesterday parried quips with reporters before his departure. Half jesting, half serious, he discussed everything from the power question to the present "nonpolitical" campaign.

He hadn't the faintest idea when the political phase of his re-election campaign might start. Perhaps it wouldn't get under way until January 4. He didn't say it, but that is when Congress resumes.

Overnight he journeyed by train to Knoxville. By automobile tomorrow he will drive across the Great Smoky Mountains to Asheville. On Thursday he will address a Democratic rally in Charlotte, N. C.

Questions on Book.

Before his departure he received reporters in his White House executive offices. Lying prominently on his desk as they entered was a book entitled "Waste."

They wanted to know if the President was particularly interested in the subject, and who wrote the book. The President told them. It was by David Cushman Coyle, consulting engineer of the National Resources Committee.

Coyle was one of the men named by Dr. William Wirt in his charges before a Congressional committee that Communists are seeking to overthrow the Government and that Roosevelt was reputed to be the "Kerensky" of the revolution.

A reporter reminded the President of this. In reply the President insisted "Waste" was quite a conservative book. He said he would quote from it. He read:

"The money to pay for good things comes out of not having to pay for loss and disaster. Soil erosion losses to date are over $10,000,000,000 in money values."

Too Low, Says President.

The fact that this estimate was far too low the President said, indicated the book was conservative.

The Democratic National Committee is said to have purchased 50,000 copies of another of Coyle's books for campaign distribution.

The President grew more serious when he discussed plans he has been considering for a grid transmission system in the TVA area, tying in with private power operations. Voicing the hope that a TVA contract with the Alabama Power Co. expiring in the next two months will be extended at least temporarily, he said he had expressed this view in a memorandum to TVA officials.

He said he does not plan to inspect any of the TVA projects in his Southern tour, but might stop at the Hiwasse Dam.

Convention Train On Exhibit Here

The mountain wouldn't come to Mohamet, so Mohamet went to the mountain. Rexall drug agents couldn't all attend a convention so the convention is being brought to them on wheels.

A 12-car streamline train, the longest of its type in the world, pulled by a 350-ton locomotive, steamed into Union Station yesterday for a convention of United Drug Co. agents.

Several thousand persons inspected the latest in fast railroad transportation. Designed especially for convention purposes the train is touring the country to enable convention goers to save time and avoid travel. Four cars containing merchandise exhibits made up of everything from nipples used by the Dionne quintuplets—the most popular exhibit—to rubber bathing caps is included in the train.

Two cars designed to accommodate 250 in convention sessions and for dancing at night a cafeteria car and executive offices are included in the train, which is two city blocks long. A crew of 50 is carried. The huge locomotive is making railroad history by pulling the 12 cars the entire 29,000 miles of its route.

Suspect Still Held In Capitol Thefts

Louis Barbagan, 27, of New Orleans, was held yesterday for investigation at the First Precinct Station while detectives investigated a long series of desk pilferings in the Capitol.

Postal inspectors said they would not handle the case because the mail Barbagan allegedly tried to steal had left the hands of the Post-office Department.

Barbagan was caught early Monday reaching for mail through the grilled bars of the House "bank," the police asserted. On him were found an assortment of keys, mail addressed to members of Congress and Capitol officials, and an instrument used in rifling desks.

6 Hurt, 5 Held As Riot Marks Talmadge Talk

By the United Press.

Dalton, Ga., Sept. 8.—Half a dozen persons were injured and five men described as National Guardsmen were arrested tonight when rioting broke out while Gov. Eugene Talmadge delivered the final address in one of the bitterest campaigns in Georgia history.

Preparing to stake his political future on his stand against the New Deal in tomorrow's Senatorial primary, Talmadge continued his speech after the miniature riot had been subdued.

None of those injured was hurt seriously, although two men described at National Guardsmen and two deputy sheriffs required first aid.

An elderly man who was not identified was knocked unconscious as fists and blackjacks flew after auditors had begun to heckle the Governor.

Winds Up Campaign.

The riot market the final stage of Talmadge's fight for nomination to the United States Senate. Talmadge, who early this year threatened to lead "2,000,00 discontended Democrats" out of his party because of hatred of the New Deal, is opposed by Senator Richard B. Russell, jr., Administration stalwart and capable campaigner, who never has met political defeat in Georgia.

The five men, who Sheriff J. T. Bryant said were members of the National Guard in plain clothing, gave the names of J. D. Garrett, J. W. Rodgers, J. T. Head, Jack Bonds and Paul Smith.

Charging the men carried weapons, Bryant asked that they be held under $10,000 bond, but Superior Judge Claude C. Pittman, who was defeated by Talmadge in the 1934 gubernatorial election, set bonds of $300 each for the men.

Deny Charges.

The bonds were furnished by G. B. Carreker, member of the State revenue commission and a first lieutenant in the Talmadge organization. The men denied they had carried weapons.

Political observers in the South generally were conceding that the President will receive the traditional solid vote of States below the Mason-Dixon line.

Talmadge's defeat would crush the last semblance of organized opposition to the Administration in the deep South.

600 Catholics Reported Slain By Anarchists

Priests, Nuns Slaughtered in San Sebastian, Escaping Clerics Say.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Saint Jean de Luz, France, Sept. 8.—Six hundred priests and nuns have been slain by anarchists in San Sebastian in the last six weeks, nine Spanish priests asserted today when they arrived disguised as Basque fishermen.

Father Secundo Razzala, 42, and his fellow priests changed to clerical robes in a little waterfront church here. Before proceeding northward, and after promising French authorities to leave the border regions, he said:

"Atrocities in which priests and nuns were victims were too horrible to describe. We spent the last eight nights hiding on the outskirts of the city. We were rescued by our parishoners, who gave us disguises and put us aboard the fishing schooner.

"Within the last 48 hours numerous demonstrations have been staged, mostly by women carrying their children in their arms, and tearfully begging the anarchists, who have been deserted by the Basques, to surrender the city and save their homes and lives.

"I believe it is possible that even more than 600 priests and nuns and other members of the clergy were horribly slain in San Sebastian during the last six weeks.

"Conditions steadily grew worse. It became unsafe for any but anarchists to appear on the streets. Now the defenses have collapsed. Only about 500 aranchists remain determined to resist, and, failing that, to destroy the city as the rebels enter. That would mean wholesale slaughter—and suicide for the skeleton defending force."

French Ace Out; Final Air Race Is Won by Rae

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Sept. 8.—A professional parachute jumper and air racer, Roger Don Rae, of Alhambra, Calif., won the final event today of the $70,000 national air races after the French hero of two previous races had withdrawn.

Rae sped through the 50-mile shell cup event at an average speed of 225.544 miles an hour to take first prize of $1,350 in the $3,000 race.

He was piloting the same ship in which he placed third yesterday behind the stunt flier from Paris, Michel Detroyat, whose smashing victory in the $10,000 Thompson Trophy event led to charges that he was competing in a French government subsidized plane.

Detroyat, fastest sky speeder of the air racers, graciously declined to enter today's final event. He said that after winning the $9,500 first prize in the main event yesterday, and previously taking $4,900 in prize money he preferred to let the American entries compete for the remaining $3,000.

The turbulence stirred up by Col. Roscoe Turner, noted pilot, about the flying Frenchman had not subsided today. Turner, who cracked up last week en route East to enter the Bendix speed dash across the country, left a doctor's care yesterday in time to see Detroyat take the Thompson trophy.

After that race Turner, over the public address system, told the crowd he thought it was a shame that American youngsters who built their own ships had to compete with a plane "built by a foreign government."

Turner said he understood Detroyat's plane was the result of five years of intensive research and work on the part of the French government, including all governmental financing and technical backing possible.

"How can $15,000 ships, constructed of any available material, possibly compete against $1,000,000 planes?" he asked.

Detroyat smiled at the charges. He said his plane its two years old and was built and is owned by the Renault Co. of France, and cost only 1,000,000 Francs.

Brazilians to Aid Spain.

Buenos Aires, Sept. 8 (AP).—Local Spanish rebel sympathizers today announced plans to charter a freighter to send vounteers and supplies to the aid of the Fascist rebel junta at Burgos. They said they hoped to get 200 volunteers and 300 tons of supplies.

School Board Session Called This Afternoon

Personnel Matters Expected to Occupy Most of Meeting.

With a long list of vacancies to fill and many matters of business pertaining to the opening of public schools September 21 to transact, the Board of Education will meet this afternoon in the Franklin Administration Building. It will be the first meeting since June.

Personnel matters are expected to take most of the time of the meeting, and members of the personnel committee of the board have been asked to meet an hour before the time of the regular meting, which is called for 3:30 p. m.

Chief of the appointments to be made is that of a new principal for Central High School, to fill the vacancy made when Harvey A. Smith, last year's principal, was appointed assistant superintendent of schools last spring. Whether this appointment is made, however, depends on the work of the personnel committee.

There are assistant principalships at Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson High Schools to be filled, and a large number of vacancies exist in the teaching and custodial staffs.

Robert A. Maurer, chairman of the personnel committee, is not back from his vacation, and the meeting of his committee consequently will be in charge of Dr. J. Hayden Johnson.

Two other members of the board are not expected to be present this afternoon. These are Mrs. Lenore W. Smith, George M. Whitewell.

Mrs. Marion Wade Doyle, president of the board, will have charge of the regular meeting, and at the board table will be Mrs. Mary A. McNeill, Henry I. Gilligan, Dr. Johnson, John H. Wilson and Henry Quinn.

Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou will submit his superintendent's report, which is expected to contain many routine business items covering the opening of school.

G. O. P. Leaders Report Gains, Plot Campaign

Landon Strength Grows in Important Centers, Committeemen Say.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 8.—A mid-campaign strategy session of the executive committee of the Republican National Committee today assayed campaign results to date as satisfactory and laid general plans for the remaining seven weeks of the Presidential battle.

Members from various sections of the country said they had observed growing strength for their nominee, Gov. Alf M. Landon, and emerged with predictions of victory on a half dozen important battlefields.

Before the meeting opened Chairman John Hamilton told press conference interviewers the Republicans would carry the Maine State election September 14 "all down the line in excess of 50,000" and said the possible extent of his party's victory might be "up to 100,000."

Reports Summarized.

The group meeting was executive but during intermissions State campaign leaders issued statements giving the gist of their reports to the gathering.

The veteran campaigner, Charles D. Hilles, of New York, said the Landon-Knox ticket had a clear lead in his State and "should have a substantial plurality in November."

George A. Ball, in Indiana, said he had told his conferees that "the whole State is gradually turning toward Landon."

Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, said a "conspicuous aspect of the Eastern swing from the Roosevelt Administration is the large number of Democrats who are rallying to Gov. Landon."

Claims Texas Strength.

Rene B. Creager, of Brownsville, said the large Texas cities were showing a swerve from the Democratic Administration.

Other members gave similar statements.

Before the committee session, Hamilton had a visit with former President Herbert Hoover and announced afterward that Mr. Hoover would start campaigning for Landon some time next month. The exact dates and places where the former President will speak were not given. Later in the day, Mr. Hoover left for New York on a business trip.

While the party's executive committee met, Carl H. Cook, Iowa State Republican chairman, announced Gov. Landon would "unfold the Republican farm program" in an address to be delivered at Des Moines on the night of September 22.

Leon Tyndall, Invalid Artisan In District for 15 Years, Dies

The sensitive fingers with which Leon Tyndall, for 15 years a helpless invalid, fashioned gay strings of beads, have been stilled by death.

Tyndall, who was 36 and lived at 2700 Ontario road northwest, was the victim of a strange spinal malady, which completely paralyzed his body. He could, however, move his hands and fingers and use his eyes.

Fifteen years ago Tyndall, who died at his home Monday, was an energetic employe in a downtown bank. He went about his duties with the vigor of his youth and ambition, and then disease disabled him.

But, despite his affliction, he maintained his smile and gamely went ahead to support himself. At first it was hard work, but then the beads slid into place easier and he conceived new and unique color schemes.

He had friends and customers in all walks of life, who came to his bedside. They liked the cheery sparkle in his eyes, and they liked to watch the amazing speed of his fingers.

Tyndall came by his genius for colors, naturally. His father, Leon Tyndall, sr., achieved fame in Washington as a designer of stained glass windows, many of which now adorn Catholic University.

Where the elder Tyndall's subjects were devotional, his helpless son's were merry and motley.

Tyndall's father, in addition to his artistic activity, was one of the founders of the Palace Laundry here.

Surviving Tyndall are his mother, Mrs. Anrie Tyndall, and a brother, William.

Funeral services will be held today at 9 a. m. in the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, followed by burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Hospital Head Denies Patient Was Neglected

Parks Worker, Who Died Later, Left of Own Volition, Says Sandidge.

B. Brent Sandige, superintendent of Emergency Hospital, yesterday denied charges that attendants were "negligent" in their treatment of William Dolan, 57, National Capital Parks foreman, hurt fatally in a fall from a parked truck August 31.

His assertion was in reply to a statement by Mrs. Rose Haislup, daughter of the victim, that Dolan was suffering from a fractured skull when Emergency authorities released him.

"Mr. Dolan left of his own accord without the knowldege of hospital attendants," Sandidge said.

"When he was brought to the hospital about 1 p. m., August 31, he was given first-aid treatment immediately. Then he was placed in a rest room for observation, while attendants treated several other

While officials said Dolan left the hospital without permission and without a nurse, the family insisted he was escorted from the institution after treatment by a nurse.

He collapsed at his home three hours later and was taken to Casualty Hospital, where he died within 30 minutes.

Espionage Trial Of Farnsworth Delayed by U. S.

With the consent of Acting United States Attorney David A. Pine, the Government yesterday agreed to extend to September 22 the date when former Lieut. Comdr. John S. Farnsworth, charged in two indictments with espionage, must enter pleas to the indictments or must attack them on technical or legal grounds.

Defense Attorneys William E. Leahy and William J. Hughes, jr., sought the postponement, and when they pointed out that Farnsworth could not be tried before October, the postponement was agreed to. Yesterday had been fixed as the deadline within which the defense must file attacks on the indictment or stand trial on them.

The naval officer has already pleaded not guilty to the first indictment against him, which charged him with communicating confidential naval intelligence information to officers or agents of the Imperial Japanese government. The plea technically was withdrawn when his attorneys asked the District Court for permission to attack the indictments on various grounds.

The second indictments, on which there has been no formal arraignment, charged Farnsworth, who is still being held in the District Jail, with conspiring with two high ranking officers of the Japanese navy to turn over confidental information to them.

MATCH TEST PROVES YOU CAN STRETCH YOUR HEATING DOLLARS

IF YOU HAVEN'T GOT MONEY TO BURN . . . GET THIS!

You don't expect as much mileage from an old worn-out car as from a new one, do you?

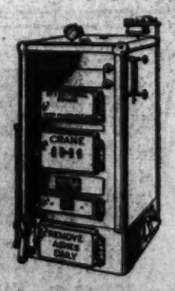
And it's the same with heating boilers. Wear and tear as well as old-fashioned construction can waste a big part of every heating dollar.

Why pay for that waste? Why let your money go up in smoke when it's so easy to put a new Crane Boiler in your home?

Why do without warmth and comfort when it costs no more, and often less, to have it?

No Money Down—3 Years to Pay

You can put a Crane Boiler in your home on the Crane Finance Plan . . . no money down and 3 years to pay at government rates.



And if your home needs it, you can replace the entire old heating system . . . radiators, valves, piping, etc., the same easy way.

HELPS PAY FOR ITSELF

If you are interested in cutting a big slice out of your fuel bill, try this simple match test yourself.

Light a match and place the palm of your hand beside it. It feels warm. Now place your hand over the flame. It's hot!

That's the big difference between a Crane Boiler—with about 50% more heat-absorbing surface over the heating gases—and the average boiler. Further, patented baffles direct the water over the hottest part of the boiler.

That's not theory. Hundreds of letters from owners of Crane Boilers back it up.

> "Being an engineer myself, I consider it a privilege to write this letter to you and assure you that my experience with the Crane Boiler has convinced me that your company is designing and building one of the finest lines of heating boilers on the market."
>
> H. M. HUGHES, Pittsburgh

That's typical of hundreds of cases of Crane comfort and economy . . . of warmer, more healthful homes and lower fuel bills.

Look into it now. See how you can get more heat for less money in your home.

Localization of Civil Strife in Spain Will Minimize Peril, Mikulski Holds.

While the American press graphically pictures the Old World hurtling onward to new conflicts Europeans as a whole are less disturbed, more optimistic about the future of world peace.

This opinion was expressed yesterday by Czeslaw Mikulski, editor-in-chief of the Polish journal of the Society of Mechanical Engineers, and one of the 16 Polish delegates attending the Third World Power Conference.

"Spain is a danger point, I admit," the Polish delegate said, "because it is a clash, not between two factions, but between two ideas—communism and fascism. But the Spanish civil strife is being 'localized' by the great European powers who realize that intervention would spell inevitable self-destruction."

What part Poland will play, encircled as she is by two powerful neighbors—Germany and Russia, in the pattern that is Europe's torn fabric, the Warsaw delegate did not care to discuss. He feels, though, that rumors of a Nazi putsch in Danzig, so publicized in the American press, are entirely premature, if not unfounded, and he laughed at the possibility of German aggression.

"Whatever happens, though," Mikulski said, reflectively, "we will not be the aggressor. We desire to live at peace with our neighbors, to improve our own lot. But overt acts shall not find us unprepared."

For Poland, he contends, no longer houses warring factions. The old spector of dismemberment is buried, too, with the fears of yesteryear, and the revitalized nation is sufficiently strong to discourage "military adventure."

The Polish delegate talked at some length about his country's internal affairs, which he claims are now in better shape, due to their "strong, constitutional, federal government."

"Selfish interests had failed to protect the people's interests," he claims, explaining the growth of the dictatorship in his country. "Thus the government had to step in."

But the dictatorship of Gen. Edward Rydz-Smigly, heir to Pilsudski's absolute powers, is neither Fascist, Nazi, Socialist nor a copy of any of the other twentieth century governments. It has a germ of each, he asserted, and it is unique because it is a republic, a democracy and a strong, centralized rule (he would not say dictatorship), all in one.

Today, Mikulski said, due to that puissant federal power, Poland has the open sesame to long-dreamed of prosperity. Unemployment is decreasing rapidly. Out of a population of 33,000,000 there are fewer than 500,000 jobless and these are being adequately cared for through social insurance and public works.

"Look at our electric consumption," the Polish delegate said. "We are now not far behind other nations. Most certainly we are ahead of those countries to the east."

He explained he referred to Soviet Russia and the Balkans.

Questioned about the reported persecution of minorities in his land, Mikulski was emphatic in stating that their internal policy was "liberal tolerance for all."

Jewell Ridge, Va., Sept. 8.—Fire, which swept through the business section and threatened the homes of several hundred miners here today caused a damage unofficially estimated at between $90,000 and $125,000.

More than 300 miners battled the fire for five hours, using dynamite and forming a bucket brigade of 600 feet in an effort to save their homes.

The blaze was discovered at 3 a. m. in the compressor room of a store building by a miner en route to work. This structure was destroyed, as was the community church and other buildings.

A dynamite blast used to halt the spread of the flames to the Jewell Ridge Hospital, Club House and Y. M. C. A. broke out windows in 30 homes and was felt at Richlands, 9 miles away.

With the major sources of food in the town consumed in the fire, officials of the Jewell Ridge Coal Corporation, owners of the mine camp, made preparations to have food shipped in. An emergency depot was opened at 9 a. m. to serve the 1,400 miners and their families. George St. Clair, general manager of the coal company, of Tazewell, took charge of the emergency distribution of food.

U. S. Debt Payment Advised by Claudel

Paris, Sept. 8 (AP).—Paul Claudel, former French Ambassador to the United States, writing in Paris-Soir tonight, advised France to pay 400,000,000 francs ($26,000,000) to the United States on her war debt.

Such a payment, Claudel wrote, would be "a gesture of justice and friendship to our allies of yesterday and perhaps of tomorrow."

(The French war debt to the United States on June 15, 1936, was $4,041,152,328.53. France's quarterly interest bill on June 15 was $74,787,725 with $250,292,292 in default.)

Claudel proposed that France pay off her debt by purchasing supplies and equipment left in France by American armies after the armistice and by issuing French railroad, hotel and theater coupons to American tourists.

Chauffeur, Clerk Held in Death Of Watchman, Coal Yard Theft

Two Washington men, one a chauffeur and the other a clerk, were being held last night in connection with the murder last week of Marion J. Riley, 59-year-old night watchman at the James E. Colliflower coal yard.

Both men are former employes of the coal yard, which is located in nearby Virginia opposite the Washington Airport.

Police admitted, however, they had no evidence to connect the two men with the crime.

The men were arrested early yesterday morning by Detective Sergts. Joseph Shimon, Earl Hartman and James Tolson. They were taken to the Third Precinct Station, booked for investigation and later removed to the Detective Bureau. There they were questioned by Arlington County Detectives Harry L. Woodyard and Hugh Jones.

Of one thing the investigators are fairly certain, and that is that the killers were thoroughly familiar with the coal yard.

After murdering Watchman Riley and rifling his wallet, they went to the garage, got an acetylene torch, and tried to open the company safe. Strangers ,the police point out, would hardly have known where to find the acetylene torch.

The torch happened to be of the welding, not cutting, type, and therefore was of no value in opening the safe. The killers then obtained a sledge hammer and cracked it open. The fact that the killers also knew where to get the hammer also appeared significant to the police.

Two nights before the murder, a watchdog that had been Riley's constant companion disappeared under mysterious circumstances. Members of Riley's family are convinced the animal was done away with by the killers as they planned the robbery and murder.

Tossers of Water Bags Are Decried by Legion

Springfield, Mo., Sept. 8 (AP).—Delegates who have been having a high time tossing water-filled paper bags from hotel windows onto the heads of unsuspecting pedestrians received a sharp reprimand today at the State American Legion convention.

Delegates roared unanimous approval of a resolution calling the practice "inexcusable folly" and the perpetrators "misguided, despicable hoodlums." Vigilantes were organized to report the pranksters and refuse them registration privileges at future conventions.

Tractor Upsets, Burns; Driver Trapped, Killed

Baltimore, Sept. 8 (AP).—A tractor Roland Gibson, 40, was operating at Loyola College, turned over on him, exploded and burned him to death today while two persons sought to extricate him.

Gibson was levelling a tract of ground for tennis courts. The tractor overturned on a slope and the motor exploded, drenching the driver with gasoline.

The Rev. Thomas Love and Wilson Weisman, who were nearby, tried to pry the tractor off Gibson, but they were unable to budge it. Neighbors who ran to the scene also were unable to rescue the man because of the roaring flames.

Vatican to Raise Pay.

Vatican City, Sept. 8 (AP).—Not to be outdone by Italy, Vatican employers announced today wage increases corresponding to those recently granted 6,000,000 Italian workers. Decrees by Premier Benito Mussolini raised the wages of industrial labor throughout Italy about 10 per cent within the past few months.

Invention Fails To Shine; Solar Engine Balks

Dr. Abbot Undaunted as Power Device Fails to Work at Rally.

By Sidney Olson.

Because a scientist wanted a daily hot bath on a California mountain-top, the generations of the future will get power from the rays of the sun when the earth's coal and oil are exhausted.

It was in 1915 that Dr. Charles G. Abbot, of the Smithsonian Institution, began the 21 years of research and experiment that culminated yesterday in the first public demonstration of his solar engine.

The demonstration was what showmen call a "turkey," and what the public knows as a "flop." Dr. Abbot, pretty much excited over a chance to show his invention to scientists and engineers from all over the world, here for the Third World Power Conference, got up early and started the machine off several hours before the crowd of celebrities arrived.

The black liquid, known generally as "No. 1142," and to scientists as "arochlor," which runs through tubes, became too hot for the machine.

The soldering along one joint melted and the liquid dripped away, soaking through the cotton-composition wrappings around the tubes and falling in a black pool in the grass backyard of the Smithsonian Institution.

When the scientists and the reporters and the radio men came, the solar engine was quiet, and Dr. Abbot's crew of helpers was looking unhappy.

Scientist Not Daunted.

Dr. Abbot, however, lank and nonchalant in his shirtsleeves, merely smiled below his walrus mustache, lifted his hard straw hat from his Mark Twain haircut, and explained the machine to the distinguished assembly with as much satisfaction as though it were running.

The scientist took the disappointment in his stride, with the casual disregard of setbacks that men of the test-tube and microscope have. To him it was a small thing, merely another obstacle to be overcome by patient experiment, by repeated and tireless trial-and-error. He was sorry that it hadn't worked for the assembled celebrities, but he realized that they, too, were chiefly interested in the principle, rather than the practice, of such a distant development as power from the sun. Since No. 1142 is available only at a St. Louis factory, a postponed demonstration was out of the question.

After the radio men and the reporters and the scientists had gone away, the doctor put on his straw hat and told how it all began.

He was stationed on Mount Wilson in California, where the great observatory is, in 1915.

There was lots of water available, but Dr. Abbot never has liked cold baths. The ordinary methods of heating water didn't appeal to him and meant considerable time-consuming drudgery, such as building fires, etc.

Source of the Idea.

So he thought it would be a very fine thing if he invented in his spare time a machine which would trap the sun's rays, and concentrate them on a tube containing heavy oil which would in turn pass through a water tank, heating it.

He worked out a crude version of the polished apparatus he has built today, and it worked beautifully. From then on he had his daily hot bath. He extended the application of the idea to cooking and baking, even storing the heat in ovens overnight.

Automatically he extended the idea again, applying it to the generation of power.

There are three concave parabolic mirrors, something like shiny troughs, hung from a huge metal cradle. Through a thin tube, suspended in the center of each mirror and connected with a metal tube that runs around the cradle, flows the liquid, which works better than the heavy oil, as that had a low boiling point.

Where the tubes pass through the mirror-troughs the sun's ray's trapped in the curved mirrors, reflect directly on them The heated liquid, which is mixed with a little lampblack to aid it in absorbing heat swiftly, doesn't boil till around 700 degrees Centigrade. It gets up to only about 175 degrees Centigrade in these tubes.

Then it passes through insulated copper tubes to a boiler, which in turn drives a one-half horsepower engine.

The machine would work best in a desert, where the sun's heat is constant and there is plenty of it. In the Washington climate it wouldn't do so well, said Dr. Abbot.

The British delegation, while enthusiastic about the idea, held that a sun-motor isn't as necessary as a fog-motor in England. If Dr. Abbot would build a motor that would produce power from fog, they joked, they'd build a monument to him in Trafalgar square that would make the Nelson statue look like a midget.

Dr. Abbot's faith is unshaken, though. He estimates that such machines erected on a large scale could produce 40,000 horsepower a day from the sunshine falling on a single square mile of desert.

He leaves the problem of what to do with all that power in a desert to future economists. According to his calculations, his machine can complete with steam engines burning coal at a cost of $3 per ton. Gano Dunn, of New York City, president of the J. G. White Engineering Co., backed him, saying these machines will be commercialized in "not so many years." He said that mirrors covering the surface of the lake impounded by the Boulder Dam would produce more power than the dam's generators.

On the Air Today

At last an effort is being made by at least one important element in radio to protect the life of a popular song. In the future, N. B. C. bands and singers who play sustaining programs will not be permitted to sing the smarter songs. The purpose also is to preserve the better things for name performers.

As a welcome by-product is the relief the ruling will bring to listeners who hear a few smash hit tunes over and over again in a concentrated period of days.

It has always appeared to me that the weakness of the "Hit Parade" was the fact it featured only those tunes heard hour after hour on other programs. But evidently the majority of listeners like 'em so hot they burn to a cinder overnight.

• • • •

Speaking of songs, most of the prominent artists themselves have tunes they personally favor. Many because of a sentimental attachment. Kate Smith's favorite is that moon song. Paul Whiteman wouldn't trade "Whispering" and "Japanese Sandman" for all the new songs. Those two numbers, recorded for Victor, brought him to the attention of the booking agents in charge of the Palais Royale in 1924.

Vincent Lopez distinctly favors "Nola," good enough for any pianist. Bunny Berigan, the swing maestro, prefers "I Can't Get Started With You." It started him on a radio career. Lee Wiley's weakness is Victor Young's "Arizona Suite"—because the composer dedicated it to her. Gus Kahn, whose name is known to all pop music followers, has a weak spot for "Gee, I Wish I Had a Girl." He composed it 22 years ago, dedicated it to his girl. She married him.

Maestro George Hall names "I Can't Do That Sum," from "Babes in Toyland" because he played in Herbert's orchestra when that operetta first was presented—and played a violin solo when that particular number came up. Jolly Coburn leans to "Anchors Aweigh." It takes him back to his days at Annapolis.

• • • •

None of them, however, can touch Wendell Hall and Riley and Farley for distinctive songs, novelties that actually made their air personalities overnight. They are, respectively, "It Ain't Goin' to Rain No More" and the peacefully buried (we hope) "Round and Round."

'Thrill' Driver Seized.

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 8 (U.P.).—Miss Celia Greene, 30, Webster waitress, borrowed an automobile today and within three hours violated every icty traffic regulation. Her case was continued until Monday, when she was arraigned in district court on charges of drunken driving, operating without a license and operating without a registration. "I thought it would be a thrill to be arrested," she told police.

Body Sought in Canal.

Lima, Ohio, Sept. 8 (AP).—Acting on information supplied in a mysterious telephone call, authorities today decided to drain a section of a canal near Delphos in a new search for the body of Noble C. Magness, 30, clothing store collector.

Flames Threaten Malibu Beach Area

Los Angeles, Sept. 8 (AP).—A widening front of fire raced down Los Flores Canyon tonight toward the $3,000,000 motion picture residences of Malibu Beach.

Defying the efforts of 500 fighters, thrown along wide fire lines, the flames raged out of control, destroyed a score of mountain cabins and advanced to within 4 miles of the screen colony.

Officers said a large dynamite cache was in the path of the blaze, which already has burned over 3,000 acres in the Malibu Mountains, 9 miles north of Santa Monica.

Excitement was blamed for the death of Nick Mellis, 23, cafe man, who succumbed to heart disease as he was driving his automobile out of the danger zone with several hundred others, fleeing as sheriff's officers spread an alarm.

Astor Diary Is Buried In Underground Vault

The two volumes of her Hollywood experiences went into the vaults of the county treasury, deep beneath the ground, surrounded by massive steel walls and protected by an intricate system of photo-electric cells.

Carlton to Open New 'El Patio' Club Tomorrow

Supper Dance Room Will Be Exclusive, With Card Admittance.

By Chanticleer.

Hardly has Labor Day announced more or less officially the opening of the fall season than comes the first big piece of news for after-darkers. The Carlton Hotel will open a new supper dance room—to be known as El Patio—tomorrow night. The decorative motif is predominantly Mexican and gives the illusion of a spacious patio. Waiters will be costumed appropriately. The ceiling is painted and star-studded—and you'll almost feel that gay senoritas are gazing down from balconies.

Music for dancing will be provided by Sande Williams and his swing band—late of the Book-Cadillac, in Detroit. Sande has played with leading name orchestras over the country, and is a skilled guitarist and violinist. Jack Gardner, his pianist, is widely known for novel comedy effects.

And here's a new wrinkle. Attendance at El Patio will be limited to those holding identification cards—now being issued—and to their guests. According to the Carlton management, this provision is for the purpose of assuring a congenial group of patrons at all times.

Have a look at some of the events scheduled for that water circus at Maryland Club Gardens, beginning next Monday: a 116-foot dive, aflame, into a 4-foot blazing tank; a family of ferocious lions trained to do their act on a float in the water; a gang of clowns headed by Johnny Banana, aquatic clown; four diving acts from the Atlantic City Steel Pier, headed by Miss Bench Bentum, world champion trick diver—and pink lemonade, cracker-jack and all the other and-so-forths.

Remember the old Arlington Hotel, at the corner of Vermont and H, where the Veterans' Administration now is housed? Thirty-one years ago Louis Clerico, majordomo at Griffith Farms, started his career there—and numbered many statesmen and international figures among his acquaintances. But for that matter, Frank McNey, your Griffith Farms host, knows a few celebrities, too!

Its got to the place where masters of ceremonies soon will have to walk tight ropes on their heads to produce that something different. Eddie White, now in charge at La Paree, does an eccentric dance this week just to show he can do something other than talk. Marlyn and Michael head the floor show with a little of everything in the dance line. Al Sakol and is orchestra for your dancing.

Mr. Hull's Plea.

In his address of welcome to the Third Power Conference Secretary of State Cordell Hull wasted little time on perfunctory generalities of the kind usually invoked on an occasion of this sort. Instead he devoted his speech to the subject which is uppermost in his own thoughts, which, indeed, is uppermost wherever men gather—the threat of war that is now hanging like a black cloud over the world.

It is plain that the enormously useful deliberations of the World Power Conference and similar gatherings can have permanent value to mankind only if peace is maintained; that, on the contrary, they will prove essentially meaningless if, as a result of the "selfish ambitions of unscrupulous persons," in Mr. Hull's phrase, or through "hope of national aggrandizement," war is let loose on the world. There will be general agreement with the Secretary's view that war might not only mean the virtual destruction of modern political thought but possibly as well, a "veritable shattering of modern civilization."

Those who are participating in the World Power Conference hail from no fewer than 50 nations and speak a host of different languages. But these differences divide them only superficially. Uniting them are the bonds of science which recognize no man-made frontiers and no confusion of tongues, and which make all the participants collaborators in a great task. It was entirely in order for Mr. Hull, therefore, to make his fervent appeal for dedication of scientific achievements to constructive ends.

Hopeful Sign.

Though the national total of Labor Day week-end fatalities almost equaled the baleful prediction of the safety experts, the District suffered fewer holiday accidents than have been recorded for several years. Not a single traffic death was reported here. This is a matter for general, although restrained, congratulation. Satisfaction over the record must necessarily be restrained, for notwithstanding the fact that this year's fatality figures show a considerable improvement by comparison with 1935, no juggling of statistics will indicate that the problem has been solved.

The explanation of the week-end record may be only guessed at. Possibly it was a fluke. It is far more encouraging, however, to consider the strenuous campaign being waged to impress all drivers with the dangers of the road and of the premiums paid by careful driving. Newsprint, movie films and radio speakers during the past year particularly have been drumming on the lessons that recklessness does not pay; that there is no substitute for caution; that the wages of speed is death. Perhaps the Labor Day performance is a sign that these warnings are beginning to have some small effect—locally, at least.

Avenol At Rome.

In advance of the meeting of the League of Nations Council, which is scheduled to be held September 18, and of the Assembly, which is to convene three days later, Joseph A. C. Avenol, the Secretary-General, has taken it upon himself to go to Rome. The presumption is that he will seek to persuade the Fascist government to resume full participation in the activities of the League.

Both the propriety and the wisdom of this move by the League's most important permanent official are open to question. It is plain that the visit of M. Avenol to Rome at this time will be interpreted by Mussolini as a sign that the League is prepared to capitulate to Italy in every particular. Since sanctions have already been called off, this would mean recognizing the validity of Italy's conquest of Ethiopia and the refusal of admission to the Assembly of an Ethiopian delegation named by Emperor Haile Selassie.

If the League unquestionably suffered a severe blow in prestige by its failure to halt the Ethiopian war, it has at least saved its face by refusing to admit the validity of Italian claims to territory obtained through violation to the Covenant. This was in line with the attitude previously taken in the case of Japan's conquest of Manchuria.

A change in this policy may at some future time become desirable or inevitable. But in that case it should, in the first instance, reflect the will of the Assembly. Certainly no such change should be brought about by back-alley intrigues on the part of League officials.

Labor's Shifting Lines.

A number of significant parallels and points of controversy stand out from the round of Labor Day speeches. Political leaders joined with chieftains of organized labor in emphasizing the opportunities of the labor movement and deploring the split in the ranks of the A. F. of L. The result was to eliminate some supposed differences between labor and political groups and to intensify the tension between rival labor factions.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, deplored the "rebellion" of the Committee for Industrial Organization which has divided the labor movement for the first time in 50 years. John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O., does not agree with this characterization of the split but he nevertheless regards it as a matter of "deep regret." Said Gov. Landon: "I, for one, am sorry to see the recent split in the ranks of labor, and hope that it will be speedily healed. The great gains made by labor through its organizations are in danger so long as this division exists."

No further evidence was needed to show that organized labor has the support of Gov. Landon. His Labor Day message and his address before the Kansas American Legion further emphasize his clear indorsement of unionism in his recent letter to Norman Thomas. Efforts of his political opponents to brand him as an anti-labor candidate now appear to have been merely stupid politics.

A new note of interest appeared in Mr. Landon's Labor Day speech. He expressed hope that "organized labor may continue in its part in the struggle for higher living standards." In this sentence the G. O. P. candidate merely voiced in different form the objective stressed by both Mr. Green and Mr. Lewis. Since President Roosevelt has consistently supported organized labor in its efforts to expand pay envelopes, there seems to be no possibility of a real controversy over this point.

Interest is shifting, therefore, to a different aspect of the labor problem. Mr. Lewis laid emphasis upon the greater returns to working men which, he said, could be obtained "under proper planning and regulation" of industry. It is no secret that Mr. Lewis supports the New Deal policy of wider industrial control which would necessarily involve some restraints upon labor. So enthusiastic is he over the Administration's labor policy that he is mobilizing the dissident unions of the C. I. O. to the support of President Roosevelt in the November election.

To Mr. Green that policy is anathema. He vigorously denied that the A. F. of L. will participate in the formation of an independent labor party. And his rejection of governmental sponsorship for labor was equally emphatic. "Labor must be free in the complete and full meaning of that term," he said. "It can not and must not be the wards of a paternalistic government." This language is strikingly similar to the declaration of Gov. Landon in his Labor Day message:

> We should remain steadfast in the belief that the concern of labor is the concern of all; that labor should be free to organize for fair consideration; that this right to organize and promote such consideration must remain forever free from governmental or any other form of coercion.

With all question as to labor's right to organize eliminated from the campaign, this controversy over the relations between labor and the Government is almost certain to come to the fore. And on this point, as the Labor Day speeches so pointedly indicate, the main body of the A. F. of L. is lined up with Gov. Landon while the C. I. O. supports the New Deal viewpoint. In spite of strenuous efforts to avoid a political as well as interorganizational split in the ranks of labor, it would be a mistake to minimize the significance of this realignment of sympathies.

The CCC And Defense.

Members of the American Legion post in nearby Maryland whose motion before a State convention to militarize the Civilian Conservation Corps was recently defeated should not miss the report just released by Robert Fechner, director of emergency conservation work. If these legionnaires are willing to agree that the pen is mightier than the sword, they will find food for thought in Mr. Fechner's report. It records the fact that 40,000 young men, illiterate when they entered the CCC, can now read and write as a result of the free instruction provided them.

This work of the Conservation Camps may be properly interpreted as a strengthening of the Nation's defenses. It is a reinforcement of a sort which probably would not have been stressed in the legionnaires' proposed militarization program, but that does not minimize its importance. Drill in military maneuvers would unquestionably be valuable in event of invasion, but invasion, for this country, is not a primary concern. Instead, in a world fast abandoning the ballot box for the concentration camp, the United States must apply itself to the preservation of that political system to which it owes its very existence.

Effective democracy depends on the intelligence of citizens. With 40,000 additional citizens now equipped to read, the capacity of the national electorate to govern itself more wisely should be, in some small degree, enhanced. What they read and how they interpret it, however, will depend in large measure on the millions of earlier-schooled citizens, who are in a position to encourage an intelligent approach to all our national and civic problems. It is the citizen in this latter category who has the real opportunity to elevate democratic principles above the shibboleths of opportunists and dictators.

As An Aid To Employment.

In his Sunday radio address President Roosevelt discussed the problem of shifting workers from relief rolls to private industry in a very realistic and helpful way. Heretofore he has largely confined his remarks on this subject to vague generalizations, emphasizing the obligation of businessmen to provide jobs for the idle, without offering suggestions as to ways and means. He has heretofore given little attention to the difficult task of placement—that is, the bringing of qualified workers into contact with employers.

Since its creation only penurious provision has been made for the United States Employment Service, although far less useful agencies have been showered with public money. Consequently, the President's publicly expressed appreciation of the importance of the service as an aid to reemployment is the more gratifying.

In announcing that he had allocated $2,500,000, in addition to a small sum advanced a few days ago, to enable the employment service to extend and improve its facilities, the President has apparently rejected amateurish proposals to take a census of the unemployed as a preliminary to an employment "drive." Up-to-date information acquired by registering those in search of work, extensive analysis of available jobs and careful classification of unemployed workers are essential to a speeding up of employment. That is the kind of information that the public employment services are being equipped to give—and it is indispensable.

The very competent director of the United States Employment Service, Mr. W. F. Persons, has pointed out that "placements in order to be lasting and effective, must satisfy the needs and desires of both employers and employes." He thinks it imperative, therefore, for every public employment office to be "as well informed as possible concerning job requirements and as skilled as possible in evaluating applicants' qualifications, in order to be qualified to act as an adequate intermediary between the worker and the prospective employer." This is a stimulating and challenging task for the Federal and co-operating State agencies, confronted not only by the kind of unemployment that is a normal incident of business fluctuations, but also by the abnormal unemployment created by depression.

President Roosevelt emphasizes particularly the value of public employment services in facilitating a return to private industry of those on relief rolls. That, however, is but a part of the work of these agencies, although they can do much to aid shifts from relief projects to private employment by establishing contacts with employers and making certain that shiftless and incompetent persons on relief are segregated from capable and conscientious workers. In such ways employer prejudice against relief workers can be effectively combated. Furthermore, as the various States set up systems of unemployment insurance, making registry with public employment services a prerequisite to drawing benefits, skilled labor temporarily unemployed will be compelled to rely upon these agencies. Thus by degrees, they will become the country's chief job-finding organization, instead of being regarded as a last resort by the discouraged seeker after work.

In building up an employment service to act as an intermediary between workers and prospective employers much can be done to shorten the period of waiting between jobs. A good deal can be accomplished also by finding jobs for men who have no means of discovering them unaided. But no employment service, however efficient, can create jobs in private industry. At present there is a lack of openings for an indeterminate number of the many millions still on relief rolls.

The President with his customary optimism rather assumes that decent jobs in private employment will ultimately be found for all. Attainment of that desirable objective will certainly not be easy. But whole-hearted co-operation between socially conscious employers and truly efficient public employment exchanges will certainly bring it closer.

An astronomer has found a star the temperature of which is 7,000 degrees Fahrenheit. And, then, on the other hand, there's Mini Hopkins.

Longer Lives.

From the Newark Star-Eagle.

A child born in 1901 had a life expectancy of only 49.24 years. A child born in 1936 has a life expectancy of 61 years and three months. These figures are deduced from statistical tables of life insurance companies.

Thus the average life span has increased about a dozen years since 1901. And this came after much had been done as compared with still earlier periods. Will the next 35 years bring a longer average lifetime to the people of America?

We live longer because we live better. We have greater knowledge. But we still have much to learn.

Genius And Environment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your recent editorial entitled "Weighed in the Balance" was not in my mind a fulfillment of the highly spectacular American spirit that I have become accustomed to regard in your paper.

After elucidating the advanced methods and comforts of living of the present day as compared with those of the time of Mark Twain you purposely or otherwise leave in the minds of your readers the assumption that "greatness" must necessarily attend in the footsteps of the more lowly environments of life and their continued existence burdened with the yoke of adversity and blinded with the fog of extreme poverty.

You did not explain, further, that Hannibal, Mo., is not so different from the other fortunate places where lives of great men first saw the light of day. How many cities are there in the world that can boast of more than one personage of so great a fame? Genius does not come in schools as do the fish in the sea. Genius is born in the soul of the man and regardless of his statue in the society of the people who later profess to be his townsmen that genius will find an outlet or otherwise die within the deceased body of the victim. Quite often wherever there dwells genius within a man's life, the neighbors look upon him as a queer sort, being apart from their professed normal existence. Genius is so scarce that it is to a degree queer to us—for what the mind cannot see, our belief cannot envisage.

If the environments of the yesteryear are so fulfilling of the traits of genius then why is it that every American who possesses more than an abundance of this world's values still seek, strive and fight and die for a still greater amount of the ballast that confines their memory to but the present generation? It it true that wealth has weakened the moral fibre of the American characteristics to the point that those who possess it are big hearted enough and considerate of the future, that they will condone our brothers to dwell on in the environments of past ages so as to wrest from the unknown something more in the form of genius?

This I do not believe. Although genius is anointed with the oil of suffering, that suffering does not have to take on the clothing of any set standard in life. Regardless of class, we have all of us our own troubles and vicissitudes in life, and the only short coming of our people is that it is sometimes the most lowly who can find the time to educate and cultivate that inherited genius, whereas, those who have all the time—relax in the warmth of ease and grow lazy in the lap of luxury.

Again I repeat that it is a discredit to the prosperity of our people when you enveigh so skillfully the unfruitlousness of a higher standard of living which, evan to reap perchance fame and renown, you would not relinquish. So long as those who possess the time and means continue to employ such a scale "to weigh in the balance" our progress there will be fewer men of genius although the number of people be perceptibly greater.

The Death Of Rep. Zioncheck.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post is to be commended for reprinting the excellent article in the Nation on the late Congressman Zioncheck. Now that he is dead, and the tragedy is forever past, he is better understood than he was in the last weeks of his life. It is regrettable that understanding and sympathy had to come too late.

Men with the social conscience and the frank iconoclasm of Zioncheck do not "go haywire" for the fun of it. Anybody who takes the trouble to examine his record as a Representative up to a few months ago must admit that he was a militant scrapper for the plain people, for civil liberties and for publicly owned utilities. What he did in his best days was a valuable enough contribution to real democracy to entitle him to forgiveness for later lapses that were due to the nervous psychology of a bright and brainy man.

It is quite probable that he would have regained his balance perfectly if he had not been swept into a vortex of criticism, ridicule and misrepresentation that was whipped on by the power trust and predatory interests. The exploiters in Washington State and elsewhere were still smarting under the sting of Zioncheck's quick and cutting words. When he broke down they were delighted beyond measure. A man with possibilities hard to measure—a man who hated and despised them and tore the hide off their backs in his remarks on the floor of Congress—had unfortunately put himself in a position where they could distort his every act and give the public an entirely wrong impression of him.

Argument For Roosevelt.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Why I am for Roosevelt:"

We will concede from the standpoint of practibility that all men are subject to human irregularities—that no man is infallible nor invincible.

President Roosevelt has concluded, and with a just cause, that big private business enterprise has abused the very privileges founded upon just co-operation instead of cutthroat competition, hence the institution of the various Government codes, NRA, AAA, NYA, HOLC, TVA, CCC, etc.

President Roosevelt has the interest of the Nation at heart and does not favor any special groups. He represents the interest that is needed most and thereby balances the human needs. The times present a social problem as well as a governmental issue hence the President adheres to the governmental regulation of business to prevent abuses, dishonest competition and exploitation that exist among the big business of America.

He is my choice for return to the White House in November.

Pedestrians' Reply.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In reply to Mr. R. M. King, it is a great pity that the Capital cannot have a few great 6-foot Irish cops to keep the jaywalkers out of the way of the brainless creatures, sitting in their little tin chicken coops mounted on four rubber wheels, rushing through the streets of this wonderful city. The jaywalkers' time is just as valuable as that of the empty head sitting in his chicken coop. There should be a stop put to the insane driving, and this town should be cleared of an overproduction of taxi cabs.

There was a time when machines had to stop when the trolley cars stop to take on and leave off passengers, but we do not seem to have that rule any more. And the jaywalker has to wait for a long line of coops of all kinds to get by, and then the trolley is moving on and we are left on the sidewalk.

After having spent 15 years on Fifth avenue, New York City, it is rather a serious job living in this city ruled by U. S. Senators from country towns. M. A. R. S.

Differs With Pegler.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The majority of columnists seem to be more or less conceited, judging by their writings, but Pegler's screed, "Premature Champ," criticizing Gov. Landon, in your last Tuesday's issue, evidenced more conceit and asininity than any column I have ever read. It was neither funny nor amusing, but downright foolish and disgusting.

On Academic Freedom.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With reference to the letter of Edwin B. Smith in the Post of September 4, expressing approval of Gov. Landon's remarks at Chautauqua about a teacher's "special oath" in the form of an interrogatory, I was much more impressed with the Governor's straightforward declaratory characterization of any teacher who thought communism as an objectionable propagandist and as having outraged "academic freedom."

I am sure the Governor believes in the Constitution far more than his leading opponent, and will eagerly, I hope, take the special oath it requires to be taken January 20, when he becomes President. It would seem more business-like to have a definite understanding with teachers as to whether they are for or against the government that employs and therefore feeds and clothes them, as well as entrusts to them the youth of the land.

To me the "freedom" to teach—to advocate the overthrow of our Government by force and violence in which Communists believe—is "license and not personal freedom, and is a crime and not academic freedom." J. D. MASON.
Washington, Sept. 4.

'Where Is He Leading?'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That picture of the President at the conference in Kansas, with Alf Landon standing behind his chair, is in my scrapbook. Jim Farley has his "end-man" smile, and the faces of all are almost audible in expression. It is a perfect tableau of the political situation.

Personally, I have great admiration for our President, as he has that priceless gift of leadership, which is so sorely needed. He has the power to draw men to him, but as a Henry George Socialist I demand to know where he is leading us.

These States of vast America, with God-given natural resources, are going somewhere, but why should land owners be a favored class, and why should the aged pensioners be compelled to pay premiums on their pensions (yet to be), when production by these same workers has grown to a stupendous total? Hunting And Crime.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is distressing to read of children riding to the hounds, being taught cruelty in place of their natural instinct of kindness to animals. Hunting is barbarous, and to call it sport proves that man is still a savage.

A fox has only speed and teeth for weapons. To outwit him with guns and outnumber him with a pack of dogs is cowardly. Even his hole is no refuge from the dogs who root him out. After running, dodging, leaping, back tracking for hours, even being intelligent enough to go upstream to hide his scent, the fox finally drops from exhaustion when the dogs fall upon him and tear him into atoms.

Is this civilized? Crime is encouraged in our youths by teaching this barbarous practice. Children will in turn kill the birds, beat the dog, put out the cat's eyes and finally kill each other. Where humane education exists, statistics prove that crime is lessened. Hunting encourages crime.

Landon As Executioner.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Westbrook Pegler asks in The Post of September 1, in his article ridiculing Gov. Alf Landon, "What is this, anyhow, an election or an execution?"

To which I reply: It's an execution—of President Roosevelt's fond hopes of reviving his New Deal, which would regiment all business and production, and plunge the country into the worst depression we ever experienced.

The Post Impressionist

Passing The Hat.

Post Office, Wednesday.

DICK JARVIS came in, asking for a letter of introduction to the District Health Office. Dick was worried. He explained:

"I've discovered something sinister, and Dr. Ruhland ought to be told about it. It's a devastating mental disease. I don't know whether it can be transmitted to human beings; but, even if it can't, it's costing Washingtonians more than taxes. It's ruining the disposition and usefulness of hold-over felt hats.

* * *

"Remember that heavy thundershower we had last Spring, about a week before the time to put away the old felts and buy the new straws? I was among its many sufferers. I'd been counting on making my old felt last out the remaining minutes of the official post-winter period, but that rain knocked my plan into a cocked hat.

"I simply had to buy a new one.

* * *

"This was a distinct trial. Still, I endured it without becoming prejudiced. Indeed, I quite opened my heart to the little newcomer, and, even now, I'm bound to say he took immediate possession.

* * *

"He was a pale brown, not a bit swanky—some people would have called him proletarian. Pedigree uncertain: a lot of cocker spaniel, a dash of Sealyham and a suspicion of Mexican hairless. Nevertheless, he was as gentle and affectionate as any felt hat I ever owned.

"He seldom barked, you had a feeling he'd never grow into a first-rate watch-hat, but he was so gentle you couldn't resist him. Lots of fanciers prefer felts that will play dead, or sit up and beg for candy. This hat hadn't any parlor-tricks; he just radiated good-nature and, even if he soon proved himself a one-man hat, he couldn't harbor a grudge against anybody in the world. "I named him 'Robin'—for Robin Goodfellow . . .

* * *

"Well, the weather was fine till straw-hat time, and then I retired Toby to the top shelf of the closet in my bedroom. I slipped him into a commodious box and wrapped the box in wrapping-paper, not having forgotten to leave, inside the box, a lavish winter-supply of hat-biscuits.

"I wanted that hat to be happy, and I was sure he'd rest contented. The last glimpse I had of him, as I closed the lid, the cunning chap was sitting up and wagging his tail—a perfect picture of innocence, humanitarianism and a sound mind in a sound body . . .

* * *

"Then, this morning—my panama being all of a sudden too dirty for duty, and the date being too late to justify a cleaner's bill—I got out Robin. I was going to be late for the office, so perhaps I was hurried and rude. Anyhow, I didn't look at him till I turned down Fourteenth street, when a little boy yelled:

" 'Hey, do you call that a hat?'

"I took Robin off, and he was a changed creature, a wicked wreck. He'd become a malicious yellow. His brim sagged savagely all the way 'round. His crown had a hole in it and was spotted like a Chinese famine-sufferer with favus. But that wasn't the worst. The worst was an unmistakable change in his disposition and mental attitude. His innocence, his benevolence and loyalty, had turned into a lowering sullenness—which broke into a growl and a snap.

"He was going to bite the hand that held him

* * *

"It wasn't because of my failure to greet him at his exhumation, either. He said it wasn't, but he wouldn't say what it was.

* * *

"I threw him in the gutter and stamped on him.

"However, the mystery haunted me. Robin had had the best of quarters. Nobody'd touched the box—no human being—all Summer long. What influence, then, had somehow reached and corrupted him?

* * *

"The next ominous thing was my discovery that his case is a common one. Although such phenomena were practically unknown in the happy days before economic pressure sowed the seeds of mental disease far and wide, I find that every one of my friends is having a similar experience with his last winter's felt. Pedigreed and mongrel, they've all turned vicious. In no instance have I been able to run down a last year's felt coming forth with its disposition unsoured.

* * *

"The theory of coincidence offers no adequate explanation. The trouble is entirely too widespread.

* * *

"Moreover, certain felts, as carefully stored for the summer as Robin was, have disappeared altogether. Owners seeking them have sought them in vain.

"Have those hats, contracting the disease, crept out secretly to spread their horrid contagion among other felts?

* * *

"I submitted my mass of evidence to the Smithsonian Institution, but Dr. Abbot seemed at a loss to account for it. It left him speechless.

"So now I want a letter to Dr. Ruhland. He's got to be made to start a felt-hat quarantine."

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

In a book called "As I Knew Them" Old Jim Watson, former Senator from Indiana, has written the memoirs of a machine politician, revealing the arrogant, pot-bellied mentality of a man who always played the game for his team in the belief that the party in power was the United States. Nowhere in the book is he aware that the people exist except as a source of votes, and he mentions labor only to say that he had labor trouble in his district.

There are no particulars about the labor trouble or the rights and necessities of the human beings involved in the trouble, and the old statesman obviously regards such matters as mere political irritations to be counteracted by gestures or diversions. In this respect the story is a contrast to the writings of Al Smith, who also was a machine politician, knowing the machine from the smallest cotter to the flywheel, but he also knew the people and was one of them—even after he moved uptown.

Of course, Jim Watson always was known for what he was, and even the Washington correspondents, with whom he still enjoys warm personal popularity, due largely to his knack for hearty expressions in stag gatherings, nevertheless regard him as a professional party man and nothing more.

* * * *

But it is gratifying to get him on paper in a personal history in which he condemns himself by his own defense and describes better than any political critic ever did the amazing audacity of the old gang. Boies Penrose once decided to make him President, and old Jim sees absolutely nothing questionable in either the material or in this casual impudence of another gang politician for whom he expresses the most touching reverence.

* * * *

But other developments intervened, including the physical decline of the boss, so Jim himself decided that the country needed Warren Harding's type of Republicanism and invited Harding to be President. The pair of them called on Penrose, and Penrose lectured Harding like an employer impressing an office boy on promoting him to the post of mail clerk.

"Harding," he said, "I'll be for you. I want to say candidly that I think you will make a better candidate than Jim. It is true you both had similar labor troubles, but you made more pleasing speeches in your campaign, while he handled matters in an open and direct fashion that left many scars. But, while I believe you will make a better candidate, I believe he would make a better President. There will surely come a crisis in your Administration, and in the presence of serious trouble of that kind you will surely sag down. But if Jim won't run I'm for you and I'll support you."

Old Jim adopts a rather querulous tone in defending not only the gang psychology but members of the gang whose names are notorious to this generation but aglow with splendid patriotism in the eyes of an old pal.

He feels deeply on the subject of thoughtless popular prejudice against men whose noble character he was in a position to appreciate in years of close personal association. And his devotion to Penrose, the master, and Harding, an amiable but indolent second-string politician, is a perfect description of his own character.

* * * *

Jim's book is a good one to have, because it is at once the confession of an old offender and the profession of faith of a man who served a political god which has been fiercely repudiated. He would never call himself a trimmer, but he trims from cover to cover and has nothing specific to offer—even in his memoirs on the Ku Klux Klan, which ravaged Indiana in his time but escaped his notice, or on prohibition.

As a Senator he was the companion and colleague of some of the most picturesque old soaks in American history, but his testament doesn't say aye, yea or no on the eighteenth amendment or on the bloodthirsty reign of the political preachers in his own State, which adopted the most furious of all the prohibition laws.

He describes and commits himself as much by the subjects which he evades in the characteristic fashion of the yes-and-no politician as by his open declarations and his inadvertent betrayals of his belief.

Old Jim has laid it on the line for the first time in his life—unwittingly, to be sure, but positively nevertheless. His book is a 300-page cartoon depicting the old gang and all its faults in detail—the more important because it is written with the hurt sorrow of a man who to this day doesn't see anything wrong with the boys who played the game beside him.

Killing of National Arouses Japanese

Shanghai, Sept. 8 (AP).—Disagreement between Chinese and Japanese officials over the advisability of sending a party of Japanese to Pakhoi to investigate an alleged "mob killing" there tonight threatened further to complicate the reported incident.

The Domei (Japanese) news agency said Chinese officials had refused to permit Japanese authorities to send investigators to Jakhoi on the ground that the Chinese could not guarantee safety of Japanese in that locality.

The news agency earlier reported that Chinese agitators at Pakhoi, in the extreme southwest of Kwangtung Province, killed Jyunzo Nakano, Japanese citizen, September 3.

He was said to have been the only Japanese resident of the town. The news agency said a Chinese mob looted his store and dragged him into the street, where he was slain.

Education Survey

185 Institutions Of Higher Learning Within 200-Mile Radius Of Washington Point Lack Of National University Here

By Lester K. Born.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

ST. PAUL said, "And from thence we fetched a compass," referring to the City of Syracuse. Paul was on his way to Rome, the capital of a great nation. Paul was a great teacher, and "teacher" suggests "education." I, too, have fetched a compass, but this was in reference to the City of Washington, the Capital of another great Nation. And that, too, suggests education.

My compass was of a very different kind from Paul's, but with it I drew a circle about the City of Washington. The radius was 200 miles. Within that radius lay the District and almost all of six States. The circle embraced Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey and most of Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia.

In this area are to be found, according to Patterson's American Educational Directory, at least 185 institutions of higher learning. By far the majority are, as one would expect, colleges or universities, for their number is over 80. Next comes teachers' colleges or normal schools with just half the number. Theological schools or seminaries number about 30. Schools of law, medicine, dentistry, pharmacy, not connected with a university, are few in number. So, too, are technical schools or colleges, and schools of agriculture. On a numerical basis, then, as well as a logical one, the major interest and significance centers about the colleges and universities.

What is the relative size of institutions in each State? Where are they located geographically? Where, according to the population centers? What percentage are co-educational? What denominational? And how old are they all?

Pennsylvania Leads States In Universities.

PENNSYLVANIA leads in numbers, with over 35 institutions, of which 5 are listed as universities. Next comes Virginia with 12 colleges and 3 universities. Then follow West Virginia, the District and New Jersey, in close order, with 8, 7 and 6 respectively. Of that number over half are universities, with the highest percentage in the District. It should be stated at the outset that some of the oldest and best-recognized institutions are the colleges. Neither size nor age alone are fair indices of value. They are helpful only when used in conjunction with other data.

Over half of the institutions still maintain a denominational connection, according to the tables in the volume entitled, "American Universities and Colleges," published four years ago. Half of this number, or 25, are in Pennsylvania alone. This matter raises some interesting queries, for the picture, on a purely statistical basis, is not accurate. While most of the colleges which are now denominational have always been so since their founding, a few have only recently come under the control of a particular church board. More have severed their early associations.

For example, Princeton has close Presbyterian associations, but it is none the less a non-sectarian university. But the University of Richmond, on the other hand, is still a Baptist institution. Or, to select an example from the very center of our circle, the George Washington University began as a lay institution, then for a period of six years operated under denominational control, and finally reverted to lay control again.

By far the greatest number are co-educational. Not quite half that number, about 26, are for men. Only ten are exclusively for women. Again a word of caution is not out of place. It is only within quite recent years that such venerable institutions as the College of William and Mary, and the University of Virginia have been co-educational. Other institutions, like the Catholic University of America, are co-educational only in the graduate school, a peculiarity that is not limited to sectarian schools.

Founding Dates Reveal St. John's Second Oldest.

NOT EVEN the historical aspect of this educational theme is free from pitfalls, especially in the case of the earliest institutions. Often the date of founding represents the date of establishment of a parent school upon which the later college was grafted, or from which it developed naturally. For example, the historical origins of St. John's College, at nearby Annapolis, reach back to 1689. That would make it the second oldest college in the United States, only 33 years younger than Harvard, and some 20 years older than William and Mary, which rightly claims to be the second oldest.

Here is the explanation. St. John's was chartered as a college in 1784, as a continuation of King William's School, which was founded on the earlier date. And even William and Mary could claim an earlier date than it usually does. In 1617 an attempt was made to establish the University of Henricopolis, but plans for that were decisively interrupted by an Indian massacre. The present college was chartered in 1693 and its handsome main hall, designed by Sir Christopher Wren — better known as the architect of St. Paul's Cathedral in London—was built in 1695.

Two colleges were founded in the seventeenth century, about 10 in the eighteenth, over 60 in the nineteenth and 5 in the twentieth. Stated in another way it means that one-seventh were established before the nineteenth century, that over one-half are later than 1850. As a matter of fact—and interest—exactly one-half were founded in the span of 30 years centered on the War Between the States, that is, 1850-80. Only five colleges were founded during the fateful years 1861-65. One was Virginia Union College for Negroes. The other four were in Pennsylvania, of which Lehigh and Swarthmore are two.

The population of the towns in which these institutions are located bears out the general impression that the average American college is not located in an urban center. Over half of the schools that come within the sweep of the compass are situated in centers of less than 15,000. One-quarter are in metropolitan areas of 100,000 or more. But that statement needs qualification. The four largest cities alone—Philadelphia, Baltimore, Pittsburgh and Washington—account for 18 colleges or universities.

Majority Of Schools Have Small Enrollments.

OVER 62 PER CENT of all these institutions have an enrollment which is less than 750. Only 18 per cent are universities with enrollments over 2,500. There is a remarkably consistent ratio of about 1 to 10 between faculty and students in the colleges. In the universities the proportion varies greatly, but, of necessity, each instructor deals with many more students because of the organization of the work. The library facilities vary greatly, although not entirely in the proportion which might be expected.

Washington is unique among the great capitals of the world in that it is not a great educational center. Paris, Vienna, London, Berlin, Madrid, Brussels are all the seats of distinguished institutions of higher learning and research. So are many other capitals. In many cases the universities located in the Capital City are neither the oldest nor the greatest by an absolute standard but in all cases they are great. That age is not an indispensable aid, witness the University of Berlin, or, in this country, the University of Chicago. That proximity to other great centers is no hindrance is evidenced in many places. There is no need to cite examples.

Washington is large enough to be metropolitan and reasonably cosmopolitan. It is the seat of the largest library in the world. Music, art and the theater are reasonably well represented in Washington. The city itself is appropriate.

The prime essentials for a great university are an ideal, then scholars, students of the highest type, books and money. Without the last it is not possible to secure and retain all the other essentials. There is precedent for all this close at hand. That many able scholars could be attracted, that many students would in turn be attracted by them, cannot be doubted. There is ample precedent for that, too.

Having begun with a reference to Paul, I close with a reference to Joshua, "And ye shall compass the city, all ye men of war, and go 'round about the city once." This passage has been variously interpreted. Can it not mean for Washington that concerted effort for the right cause will bring results?

Power Experts Discuss Set-Ups Of U. S. Utilities

By Felix Bruner.

The American controversy over public utility holding companies became involved yesterday in the discussions of the third World Power Conference, now under way in Washington. While representatives of foreign countries gave calm recitals of the accomplishments of their homelands in the development of electric production and transmission, American representatives insisted upon going into financial structures.

Robert F. Healy, of the Securities and Exchange Commission, insisted, in a paper prepared for the conference, that the utility company of the future should "devote itself more to the production and sale of gas and electricity and less to the production and sale of securities."

On the other side, J. F. Fogarty, president of the North American Co., said that the holding companies were instrumental in development of utilities in the early period when capital was timid and difficult to attract and that they had much to do with the tremendous growth of power consumption.

The power conference yesterday was divided into three sections, in all of which the discussion was largely technical. During the morning one session discussed "Significant Trends in the Development and Utilization of Power Resources." The two afternoon sessions discussed "Organization of Private Electric and Gas Utilities" and "Organization of the Production, Transportation and Distribution of Natural and Manufactured Gas." Five power sessions will be held today, continuing discussion of operating problems.

Sessions on Dams.

The Second Congress on large dams, meeting in conjunction with the power conference, discussed construction problems at two sessions yesterday.

At one of the power sessions yesterday it was predicted that the world is at the beginning of a great "power boom." It was forecast that during the next 15 years the consumption of electricity would be almost doubled. Every nation reporting noted a sharp increase in the consumption of power.

The writers of the papers presented—but not read—at the sessions felt for the most part that improved machinery and increased power use will not necessarily mean a large drop in employment. One English paper noted that the increasing use of power and the tendency to automatic control machinery had brought about in Great Britain a decrease of 182,000 operatives. This was partly offset, however, by employment of 102,000 additional technical and clerical workers.

Dr. Harlow S. Person, a New Deal power consultant, warned of the responsibility attached to the power industry throughout the world as the power boom progresses. He charged that the coal industry is based on peonage of labor; that the oil and gas industry is based on rapid exploitation of limited resources, that much water power is going unused; that unification and interconnection of utility systems has been limited, and that electric service has not been extended in the most rural areas.

Cites Book Values.

Discussing utility financing, Person said that "American private utilities place a $17,000,000,000 book value on their properties, although the physical worth of those properties is about $12,000,000,000."

On the same subject Healy declared that "the practice of pyramiding control of operating companies through a series of subholding companies, together with other practices, has enveloped an unusually stable industry with a cloud of uncertainty and speculation."

He suggested that it would have been far better for the consumer if securities had been based upon cost and not upon valuations or appraisals.

The "yardstick" method of regulation is inaccurate and unfair, John E. Zimmerman, president of the United Gas Improvement Co., wrote. He asserted that regulation of utilities by State and local commissions has been satisfactory to the public interest and that development of "yardstick" projects shows lack of faith in local regulations.

On the other hand, James C. Bonbright, of the New York Power Authority, and William E. Mosher, of Syracue University, praised the yardstick method, declaring that in many instances the public had lost faith in local utility commissions. They warned that the future of the industry depends upon more effective regulation.

Foreign speakers for the most part opposed too much Government interference in the power industry. Michel Deutsch, head of the Department for Commercial Research and Electrical Developmen in Belgium, said that consolidation of small operating units results in improvements, in a reduction of costs and does not increase rates to consumers. On the other hand, he said, there are limits beyond which consolidations could not be carried. He said the law of diminishing returns would eventually be a barrier.

Tells of Swiss Utilities.

Dr. Charles Merz, a member of the British government delegation, suggested improvements could best come from the initiative of the industry itself. He said the industry is in a better position than anyone else to know its faults. He told of improvements in the British power system and added that these improvements were initiated by the industry. Consolidations, particularly in London, he said, have given consumers the full benefit of these improvements.

C. F. LeMaitre, Swiss utility man, said electric service is available to 98 per cent of the private dwellings in his country. He said this unprecedented situation had been brought about without government interference. In many instances, however, he added, utilities are owned jointly by local government units and private stockholders.

"There is no public desire," he said, "for intervention or participation by the government in the electrical industry."

Guiseppe Cenzato, vice president of the National Union of Electrical Industries of Italy, told of the development of the industry in his country, largely through the use of water power.

The Vandals' Return

Spain Repeats Her Bitter History, With Absolutism Fighting For Rule Of Land And All Europe Affected By Struggle.

The following is reprinted from a recent issue of the London Economist.

FOR 2,500 YEARS NOW, Spain has been an arena in which influences and forces from Europe and North Africa have alternately swept over the country—now from this direction, now from that. And all the time, since Carthaginian and Sidonian merchant-navigaors slipped across from Africa to colonize the fertile Spanish coastlands on the Mediterranean, the people of the Spanish interior have been engaged in more or less active resistance to these various intruders.

Their incursions, however, have had a more than local influence on the course of history; for the intruders, like the Carthaginians who founded Cartagena (Carthago Nova), have often used their Spanish strongholds as the base for further and often far-reaching military enterprises—as Hannibal and Hasdrubal did when they marched from Spain across into Italy in order to prevent Rome from assuming the hegemony of the Mediterranean. The European power, after years of war, ultimately annihilated the North African power, and Rome assumed her sway for a period of 700 years over the Iberian peninsula.

At a later date a great movement started from a different quarter. In the year 406 A. D., when Italy and the Western Roman Empire itself was hard pressed by Alaric and his Visigoths, the provincial legions were recalled from Gaul, Britain and Spain for the defense of Rome. As soon as the legions quitted the Rhine frontier, a wave of German tribes, themselves urged from the rear by Huns from the Asiatis steppes, poured over the river into Gaul. Among them came the Alans and the Vandals. The latter were an East German tribe which had already split into two sections—Asdings and Silings. The Vandal hosts, pillaging churches and villae as they went, blazed a trail of devastation across Gaul—uno famavit Gallia tota rogo, says the ecclesiastical chronicler—and they repeated their dreadful progress (which has given their name its present evil meaning) in Spain.

Visigoths Attacked At Rome's Instigation.

ROME ASKED the Visigoths to attack the "barbarians" in Spain; the Siling Vandals were annihilated; and Rome then withdrew the Visigoths and settled them in Southern France.

Under the brilliant Vandal King Gaiseric, they crossed the straits in 429 and became Roman federates in the luxurious North African province and granary of Rome. In 433 they captured Carthage; and in 442 the almost effete Roman power was forced to recognize Gaiseric as independent king of North Africa—a recognition not even then accorded to the Visigothic and Burgundian "kings" who had seized most of Gaul and Spain.

In this way the Vandals cut off maritime communications between Rome, the Eastern Empire at Constantinople, Spain, and Egypt. By so doing, they were the first enemies of Rome since the age of Hannibal to challenge successfully that precious possession of Rome: command of the great Mediterranean highway.

Three centuries later in Arabs, recruiting Moors en route, swept from Egypt and the East over North Africa and into Spain; and the Vandals, always a small tribe, who had been reduced by wars, and had mingled their blood with Romans in North Africa, mingled it again with the soldiers of the Prophet when they embraced Islam rather than perish.

Saracens Found Feudal System Easily Disintegrated.

MEANWHILE, between the collapse of the Western Empire in the first half of the fifth century and the invasion of Spain by the Saracens in the year 711, Spain fell into the hands of the Visigoths. Gradually the first traces of feudalism—urged by the need of purely local jurisdictions—caused the local Visigothic leaders to style themselves "kings," the equivalents of the Merovingian and Carolingian barons. This early Spanish feudal separatism proved fatal against the Saracens, who swept over one region after another, defeated the Visigothic King himself, poured across the Pyreness into France, and threatened to change the course of history by bringing the whole of Europe under the banner of Islam. But the tide was turned back at Poitiers in the year 732, where Charlemagne's famous grandfather, Charles Martel, the great major domo of the last puny Merovingian monarch—"the hammer of the Turks"—routed them in one of the fifteen decisive battles of the world.

Thereafter, Spain fell under the sway of the Caliph of Damascus; Morish art, mathematics and science progressed much more rapidly than their stagnant Christian counterparts, under the dead hand of the church, and for five centuries, only the little kingdoms of Leon and Aragon, immediately south of the Pyrenees, maintained the Christian and secular forces when Ferdinand, of Aragon, and Isabella, of Castile united Christian Spain once more.

All this time the Mediterranean remained the highway of that medieval trade which, proceeding across the Asiatic land routes from China and Persia to the Syrian and Palestinian coast, was then shipped by the merchant-citizens of the Italian city-states—Genoa, Venice, Lucca, Pisa—to the Mediteranean ends of the west European highways. The Saracens had prevented Charlemagne from uniting his resuscitated west Roman Empire with that of the Empress Irene at Constantinople, and from joining Spain to it:

But when, in the fifteenth century, Portuguese and Spanish navigators discovered direct sea routes to the New World, and to Africa, India and the Far East, Portugal and Spain became great powers. From that time onward the Straits dwindled in importance until a French engineer linked the Red Sea to the waters of the Mediterranean.

Spain's Decline Marked By Violent Outbursts.

THE LONG DECLINE of Spain as a great power was always accompanied by outbursts of fissiparous violence, the fruit of a despotism which after the Great War and still today seeks to repress legitimate local aspirations for autonomy by force of arms.

In an attempt to wrest the Portuguese harbors from Britain, Napoleon compelled Spain to make war on Portugal and tricked the old Spanish King Carlos into resigning his throne in favor of Napoleon. A continental power was thrusting its hand into Spain, but the English, under Wellington, organized Portuguese resistance and eventually rolled the French armies back to defeat outside the walls of Toulouse.

The Spanish people were enthusiastically on the side of Wellington, who appeared to them as a deliverer not only from foreign oppression but also from the domestic exploitation by short-sighted despots. Unhappily, in 1823, Canning, foreign minister of England, "called the New World in to redress the balance of the Old;" he recognized the rebel Spanish colonies as independent states for the good of British traders, but he was not prepared to withstand the restored French Bourbon King's desire to march into Spain and abolish the popular constitution which an enraged populace had extorted from a Bourbon monarch.

The French, under their restored Bourbon King, declared war on Spain in 1823, with the approval of the other members of the "trade union of despots," Czar Alexander and Metternich. The constitution was abolished. But the Bourbons and the Napoleons vanished from the stage in France, and the Third Republic found itself drawn ever closer toward a solidarity with Britain (who virtually commanded Portugal) and with the democratic forces of Spain. It seemed as if western Europe, from North Africa and the straits to Ireland and as far east as the Rhine, would prove a compact repository of democratic institutions and of western individualistic culture.

That aspiration has been wellnigh shattered within the last few weeks. Separatism and popular resentment against centralized power—not unnaturally identified with the rule of forcible tyranny—are today the mainsprings of a bitter, unyielding popular resistance to a military rebellion which seeks—as sought the Romans, Bourbons, Alfonso and Primo de Rivera—to establish absolute power in the centralized administration of Spain. As in times past, so now, the approaches to the Mediterranean and the control of its trade routes are once again en jeu in Spain. And as then, so now, the power that rules in Spain may play a major part in European politics. Once again, in the cause of despotism, Vandals have returned from North Africa to Spain. Good Europeans may well hope they will not retrace their steps any further.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Cheering News Today.

The hosiery industry announces a boom. Shipments for July, just announced, were 36 per cent over the same month in 1935. Nothing could be more encouraging to Uncle Sam. The people are wearing socks again.

* * * *

Not only that, but some of them have two pairs.

* * * *

The National Association of Hosiery Manufacturers reports that 9,321,587 pairs of stockings were sold in July. And that's during a month when anybody can get along without 'em.

* * * *

Pairs, mind you! We are so far out of the depression that people must be wearing 'em on both feet once more.

* * * *

Let's do a little figuring . . . 9,321,587 pairs . . . that makes 18,643,174 socks. It's a lot of socks for any time of year, folks.

* * * *

It was only a couple of years ago when things were so bad that if a man was seen with socks on he was accused of putting on airs.

* * * *

It was almost as bad as appearing publicly in shoes.

* * * *

We understand the Democrats claim full credit for the big pick-up in the sock situation.

In fact, Jim Farley even goes so far as to insist that he will have the people back with an extra suit of underwear by election day.

* * * *

Jim says Hoover was talking of two cars in every garage when the American people would have been satisfied wiht one sock on each leg.

* * *

The Republicans, however, put a different interpretation on the hosiery boom. They say that if the American people didn't feel certain the Republicans were coming back into power they'd know they wouldn't have any use for socks and would still be planning on going through another four years barefooted.

President Roosevelt has made no official statement. He is said to point merely to the sock record.

He denies the G. O. P. slur that business is still so bad that four members of the Brain Trust are still wearing spats to hide the fact they haven't a sock to their name.

Landon hasn't said a word so far. But he thinks only a Republican victory will bring back the silk shirt industry.

Kissing Queen Of Hollywood Picks Favorite

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Sept. 8.—Dark-haired Andrea Leeds, "most-kissed girl in Hollywood," at last hands down a verdict in her sensational three-man kissing marathon.

The winner and new (kissing) champion is John Howard Payne, former New York stage juvenile. Demure Miss Leeds and the blushing champ are well on the way toward the altar.

Payne was rated a bad third in the race by smart Producer Sam Goldwyn, for whom it was staged. Three candidates kissed Andrea 467 times—from morning until night—in screen-test competition for a part in "come and get it."

The prize went to Francis X. Shields, reformed tennis champion, who kissed Andrea from 6 a. m. until noon. Bob Lowrey, another Broadway boy, who relayed on the Leeds lips from noon until 3 p. m. rated second, and Payne, who sprinted from 3 to 6 p. m., was out of the official picture entirely . . . which shows you can't gauge a kiss by looking at it, or at least Goldwyn can't.

Leeds refused to make a decision of her own at the time, merely moaning: "My lips are bruised," and the first intimation came when Payne stopped gallivanting bright spots with Eleanor Powell, bronze-haired film tap-dancer, to devote his time exclusively to Andrea.

Asked what it meant the "Kissable Kid," born Antoinette Lees in rough-tough Butte, Mont., cracked through with admissions which for Hollywood were nothing short of reckless:

"I promised not to tell, but he's the most romantic type I've ever known . . . and the manner of our meeting was so breath-taking I recommend it to all young people."

Practically the wedding march.

Pressed for comment why her selection differed from Goldwyn's, Andrea cast down her eyes and quipped:

"After all, it was me John kissed . . . not Mr. Goldwyn."

Mechanically minded Bruce Cabot is off to Indianapolis September 20 to work two weeks in an automobile factory trying to pack more knots in the motor of his already high-powered roadster.

"She'll cruise at 100 now, but we ought to do a way better than that," said Cabot. "Anyway, I've always wanted to take a whirl around that brick oval."

Clarence Brown is planning a sure enough "flying trip"—to Europe. He'll fly to New York, crate his plane and ship to England, then reassemble it for an air tour of the continent. The director said he won't be able to take off for a month or so, which is just as well. It will give his elbow, broken stopping a dog-fight last spring, a chance to heal.

Feminine stars on the Metro lot have gone domestic in a big way. Joan Crawford, Eleanor Powell, Jean Harlow, Myrna Loy and Virginia Bruce are attending daily cooking classes given by K. Van Collen, who operates the studio cafe. Don't ask us why.

Robust Georgie Raft gets the rough-and-tumble part he's been crying for in Gary Cooper's "Souls at Sea," an ocean-going thriller. They'll be co-starred, Raft, by the way, is due to dust off East this week to make sure of a seat at the world series.

Joseph Haydn

By William Lyon Phelps.

A Biography.

Here is the best book for children and youth on a musician and on music that I have ever seen. A delightful square volume called "Joseph Haydn, the Merry Little Peasant." It is written by Opal Wheeler and Sybil Deucher. It is illustrated by Mary Greenwalt. It is published by E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.

* * * *

The pictures in this book, which appear on nearly every page, are irresistible; and the value of the work for children who have already taken simple piano lessons or who are about to take them is enormously increased by printing within the body of the text the musical scores of a large number of Haydn's most ravishing and popular melodies. It seems to me that this volume may be called absolutely perfect; it is indeed ideally adapted for its purpose.

A brief preface by the famous professional musicians David and Clara Mannes accurately sets forth the aim of the volume; and the promise made is fulfilled: "In this story you will learn to know the little boy, Joseph Haydn, who loved music so much that he was willing to give up anything for it, and you will follow him through his struggles and successes until he becomes the great master. It will help you to play Haydn's music better when you know the man who created all this beauty."

* * * *

Unlike many musicians, the little boy Haydn lived to be an old man and earned the affectionate nickname Papa Haydn, which will never be forgotten.

His rise from humble poverty to world-wide fame, to the famous meeting with Mozart, to his receiving the degree of doctor of music from Oxford, is told with fascinating skill.

I really cannot say too much in praise of this book. For the thousands of little boys and girls who are learning music of any kind, this is the best possible gift.

"The Last of the Mohicans"

Presenting Chief Harold A. Tantaquidgeon, whose noble ancestor, Uncas, leader of the Mohicans almost two centuries ago, is revivified by Hollywood in the screen feature succeeding the present bill at Loew's Capitol. Reputed to be the last full-blooded male member of the tribe, the chief is now visiting Washington.

About The Showshops

(With Gerald C. Gross, Batting for Nelson B. Bell)

ALTHOUGH it was this department's misfortune yesterday to miss the Mauch twins, Billy and Bobby, we did establish contact with Chief Tantaquidgeon whose visit, like the Mauch boys', was timed to coincide with the impending opening of a motion picture.

The chief, we are pleased to say, strikes fire as an honest-to-goodness Indian even if his first name is Harold and he speaks with a "down East" accent. As for that accent, it is logical enough because Chief Tantaquidgeon is a Mohican and the Mohicans were among the earliest settlers of what is now New England.

Anything but a stranger to the Capital—he was formerly attached to the Coast Guard, and a sister, Gladys, is an employe of the Bureau of Indian Affairs—the 31-year-old brave's current stay here is in connection with the opening of "The Last of the Mohicans" at Loew's Capitol on Friday.

Indeed, he claims to be the last full-blooded male Mohican left; in short, the chap James Fenimore Cooper had in mind when he wrote the novel which Hollywood has now picturized with sound. Although some 200 tribesmen survive today, most of them concentrated in Mohegan, Conn., but many scattered throughout the world, Chief Tantaquidgeon is reputed to be the only male descendant of the great chieftain, Uncas, who will be reincarnated on the Capitol screen this week-end.

It is unfair, however, to give the impression this Indian visitor is forever heralding his pedigree. On the contrary, he is satisfied to say little about himself, letting his Washington handlers speak for him. He is of medium height, wears native garb most of the time, dislikes our hot weather ("I wore a topcoat in Boston last week") and frowns upon—but does not deny—the story that he is looking for a bride.

You see, Chief Tantaquidgeon is still a celibate because his squaw-to-be must be a pure-blood of the Algonquin group like himself and, outside his own family, where is he to find such a one? He dismisses the Indian women on New England reservations as half-breeds. The red-skin maiden he takes as a bride shall not only be of the blood but also be versed in the arts and crafts, upbringing of papooses and housekeeping.

He admits it's a tough assignment and, meanwhile, he is content to teach Indian lore in the public schools and, in the off season, help call attention to the glory of his ancestors by traveling in advance of "The Last of the Mohicans."

Nor does he mind if you call him Tom for short. Tantaquidgeon, incidentally, means "good swimmer."

Billy and Bobby Mauch took Washington right and proper yesterday. After lunching with the various drama desks at the Earle Building, they set off on a grand tour of the city which took them to the Department of Justice, Washington Monument, Library of Congress, Smithsonian Institution and other fairly well-known landmarks.

Billy, need we remind, is the ingratiating 11-year-old who plays the young Anthony Adverse in the extended motion picture of the same name which a midnight preview will usher into the Earle tomorrow. The twins are leaving for California in a few days to play together in Mark Twain's "The Prince and the Pauper," which goes into production next week.

Biggest thrill of the day, especially for Bobby, came with their trip to G-Men headquarters in the Department of Justice Building. Officials there, accustomed to scrutinizing faces for the most inconspicuous marks of identification, were positively unable to tell the boys apart. Only their fingerprints gave them away, for they are totally unlike. The prints were placed in the civil file, alongside those of John D. Rockefeller, jr. et al.

Heartening evidence that the Washington Civic Theater, the announcement of whose founding was made only a few days back, tends to pursue seriously its aim of serving up distinctive dramatic fare is presented with the news that Day Tuttle is coming here to guide the enterprise through its first season.

Director, actor and playwright, Tuttle has achieved an enviable reputation as director and manager of two of the most outstanding of all New England's summer theaters, namely, the Westchester Playhouse at Mount Kisco, N. Y., and the Ridgeway Theater at White Plains, N. Y.

He is a graduate of the Yale Drama School and has been associated with the Lobero Theater of Santa Barbara, the Jitney Players and the American Laboratory Theater. Roles which he has taken on the professional stage include Marchbanks in Peggy Wood's production of "Candida," Raleigh in "Journey's End" and John in "Smilin' Thru."

Tuttle has directed such hits as "What Every Woman Knows," "Death Takes a Holiday," "Elizabeth the Queen," "Biography," etc. Performers who have worked for him include Margaret Sullavan, Henry Fonda, Burgess Meredith, Ina Claire, June Walker, Ruth Gordon, Harry Ellerbe and Tom Powers.

He will serve the Washington Civic Theater on a professional salaried basis, giving it all his time and directing all of its regular productions. "He is coming because he believes," quoting the announcement, "that the future of the American theater is in its decentralization through establishment of just such theaters as Washington's new one, and furthermore, that Washington is 200 per cent more potentially exciting from a theatrical viewpoint than any other city in the country."

Tuttle is expected to come here September 18 or 19 and start work immediately on the October presentation.

Envoy Asserts Bolivia Booms Under Fascism

New York, Sept. 8 (AP).—Luis Fernando, Huachallo described Bolivia as "peaceful and prosperous" under the provisional government which came into power last May when he arrived today to represent his government at Washington.

The newly appointed Minister from Bolivia to the United States arrived with his wife on the Grace liner Santa Clara. He is a son of the late Fernando Hauchallo, who held the post his son now assumes 34 years ago, and later became President of Bolivia. He said he would go to Washington in a day or two.

Hollywood

Watching Them Make Pictures.

Hollywood, Sept. 8.

On the set of the flicker "The Plainsman," the big acting is done by Director Cecil B. DeMille and not by Gary Cooper and Jean Arthur. Director DeMille always gives a good show.

JEAN ARTHUR.

In fact, Gary Cooper sits in his chair and watches DeMille, and is as amused as if he were a tourist visitor. Director DeMille paces the set, and there is always a man about to do his bidding without being told.

DeMille, after marching back and forth, suddenly decides to sit down. He doesn't call for a chair. He doesn't look around. He merely starts to sit down, and the chair has been placed where he has decided to park. DeMille has the utmost confidence in his "yes men." Time passes, and Director DeMille extends his hand. Another "yes man" places a glass of water in it. He doesn't even have to ask. They know when Director DeMille is thirsty.

* * * *

He is also a showman in his office. When you visit him in his office and have a conference, although it may be social, there is a secretary to take it down. He keeps the "minutes" of all his conversations. When you visit him the next time, you say: "Now, when I was here I said to you——" for he calls for the secretary and has her read your very words to you.

Oh, yes—on the set Gary Cooper and Jean Arthur played a dramatic scene, but the real actor was Director Cecil B. DeMille.

* * * *

It is an outdoor football scene that Director David Butler is shooting for the flicker "Pigskin Parade." A wooden grandstand, supposed to be a section of the Yale Bowl is filled with extras, portraying the rooting section of the Texas State University. The stars of the picture, Arline Judge, Johnny Downs and Betty Brable are in the front seats, cheering.

They are yelling for the Texas football team playing Yale. The actual game, which will be seen on the screen, has been filmed already. The stars must be photographed rooting for the important plays.

Director Butler speaks into the public address system: "Your team has just missed connections on a 45-yard forward pass. And you feel bad about it." Behind Director Butler and the camera, there is an actor in a football uniform. He hurls a football at a wall so the cheering section will know when to look dejected.

* * * *

"Now, the next play," says Director Butler, "is the touchdown. You've made it. Now, let me hear you go to town."

The football player throws the football toward the wall. The stands go wild. They shout. Hats are tossed into the air. They hug each other. Pennants are waved furiously. The cheering is terrific. Looking at the cheering section, you'd honestly believe that it was an autumn Saturday afternoon. The actors are actually exhausted after their outburst.

"That's fine, fine," says Director Butler. "That's the first touchdown. The script calls for four touchdowns."

Cotton Acreage Cut by Drought; Market Climbs

By the Associated Press.

Drought damage to this year's cotton crop, reflected in an official Government estimate of an 11,121,000 bale production yesterday sent prices for the South's staple soaring.

Arid weather in the western end of the coton belt caused the Federal Crop Reporting Board to reduce its forecast of this season's yield 1,300,000 running bales below its August 1 estimate.

The 11,121,000 bales estimate for 1936 was still above the short crops of the last two years—10,638,000 bales in 1935 and 9,636,000 bales in 1934—but well below the five-year average of 14,667,000 bales in 1928-1932.

The sharp reduction apparently surprised the cotton trade and at New Orleans, all options shot up to the 12-cent a pound mark or more in one jump, advancing from $3 to $3.50 a bale.

Cotton for delivery in October, which had been selling for 11.43 when the market closed for the report, reached a peak of 12.29. December climbed to 12.21; March, to 12.26. The market later sold off a little, but gains ranged to $3 a bale.

Traders on the New York Cotton Exchange termed the bullish government report "sensational" as cotton spurted 75 points, or about $3.75 a bale.

A stream of buying orders with both domestic and foreign trade reported represented, sent the New York list above 12 cents. October cotton reached 12.22; December, 12.35; March, 12.31, and May, 12.25. The market later sold off a few points from the peak, but closed steady.

"Very drastic deterioration" of cotton was said by the Federal board to have occurred in the area "from Mississippi and Tennessee to western Texas and Oklahoma" with most serious damage in the latter two States "where many fields are almost a complete failure."

Commenting on the variation in the two government estimates only a month apart, the board said "cotton plants were in excellent growing condition and gave promise of setting a heavy crop" on August 1, but that arid conditions had followed.

Culbertson on Bridge

Clever Play for a Bad Contract.

Many of the finest "hoax" plays in bridge depend for success on the speed of their operation. The longer one thinks, the greater time he gives to the opponent to do some thinking on his own account. Moreover, a protracted "huddle" reveals the existence of a problem, which automatically induces solving efforts by all hands.

Walter Malowan, nationally known expert, pulled a bad contract out of the fire by his shrewd and speedy handling of the declarer's cards in today's hand.

East, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 diam.	Pass	2 diam.	Double
Redouble	2 hearts	Pass	3 hearts
Pass	4 hearts	Pass	Pass
Double	Pass	Pass	Pass

As may be seen, both North and South bid their hands up to the very hilt. None of their bids really was bad, but every one (except North's take-out double) was questionable. The cumulative effect naturally was to land them in a contract on which few banking houses would loan money.

Even the fact that West chose to open the king of spades did not delight Mr. Malowan when he saw the dummy. (West felt there was no future in a diamond opening, since he had too many of them. He hoped to find partner with either the ace or queen of spades.) Dummy won the first lead with the ace and, with outward poise but, I am certain, inward quaking, declarer made the one play that would give him a chance for contract. He led a low trump from the dummy. If East had had cause to suspect that the declarer was in a quandary for his second play, he might have analyzed his defense more carefully. As it was, it never occurred to him that his partner might hold the ten of trumps. He clattered up with the king, and returned the ace and another heart on the assumption that West had the spades stopped with the queen, that he himself had clubs stopped, and that declarer could thus be deprived of diamond ruffs. But, on winning the third round of trumps, dummy's ace and king of clubs were laid down, followed by a third round which declarer ruffed. The queen dropping from East's hand established the fourth and fifth clubs as good tricks. South had only to enter the dummy with a spade and then discard his remaining two diamonds (he already had discarded one on the club king) for not only his doubled contract but an overtrick as well.

It is easy to observe that East's defense was far from good, but the point is that Mr. Malowan made his position as difficult as possible. It should be observed that, with the bad trump combination in the North-South hands, it was almost futile to try to avoid losing three trump tricks by any straightforward play. Even if the high honors had been split between the East-West hands, dummy always could be ruffed down by diamond leads, and in that way the defenders could assure themselves of a third trick in trumps. There was, of course, the danger that the king of spades opening lead had been a singleton, and the further danger that East might hold the ace-king-ten of trumps, but if that bad lay of cards actually had obtained, there was nothing that the declarer could do about it. The real virtue of the hoax was that it risked nothing to gain a great deal.

The Red Pavilion

By Pauline Stiles

SYNOPSIS.

Shortly after the World War Roger Mallard, handsome young Englishman, is embittered by the loss of hearing in one ear from a war injury. Mal has been raised by his godfather, William Grimwold, an actor. Grimsay persuades Mal to attend a New Year's Eve party, where he meets lovely young Pamelia Wyeth, though he forgets her on meeting Zelda Manners. A month later Mal marries Zelda. After two years the marriage ends disastrously. In a rage at his failure to make a living on the stage, Zelda flings a mirror at Mal and unknowingly destroys the hearing in his other ear. Fourteen years later, under Grimsay's tutelage, Mal has become a great screen sin pictures, hiding his affliction from his public. Zelda has refused him a divorce. Pamelia Wyeth has a home in Pasadena. David Barkley, son of an old friend, boards with her. At the premiere of Mal's latest film David meets Ellen Greet, and invites her to a New Year's Eve party at the hotel where Mallard lives, and asks Pamelia along as chaperon. Mal is mourning the sudden death of Grimsay. He writes a letter of resignation to his producer.

CHAPTER 2.

The Hero in Person.

Mal arrived at the ballroom doors in time to see Mr. Barkley's party being seated. The room was still glittering with its Christmas decorations, white and crystal unrelieved by color.

"I've made a reservation," Mal told him, "but if I may have the table behind the tree next that party I'd like it."

"Certainly, sir. It is yours already."

"Hope you'll enjoy the show here this evening, Mr. Mallard."

"I'm sure I shall," Mal smiled. He pocketed his glasses and looked through the fir tree branches at Mr. Barkley's table just beyond.

Talk, along with an inexpensive wine, had already begun to flow around the table, separated from Mal's only by the tree. He saw the little dutchess with Devonshire shake her head and frown meaningly at Mr. Barkley, who with an exasperated shrug turned down his glass.

"Never you mind," returned the gentleman in question, crunching dismally on a radish.

This must be Peg speaking: "Trouble about parking. He'll be along."

The shining amber gaze of Miss Ellen Greet, looking hopefully expectant, roamed at intervals about the ballroom. And every time she did so the deep eyes of the little duchess looked her over with approval. By jove, they were as satisfactory a pair of eyes as Mal had ever had the pleasure to watch! Beautifully spaced and modeled. Glinting bluely with humor and a quick understanding, and withal most steady and direct. Mal felt, with a hungry longing, that she'd be delightful to talk to.

"O, look! There goes Norma Shearer."

"David says he saw Roger Mallard in the lobby," Miss Greet announced with the air of imparting information that would dim the appearance of any mere feminine star.

"I don't believe it," the duchess put in flatly. "Don't let David tease you."

Paging Miss Greet.

Just then Mal saw all heads attentively jerk up and turn toward the door. His eyes followed theirs. A page boy was coming down through the aisles of tables, calling: "Miss Ellen Greet. Paging Miss Greet."

That young lady looked quite dumfounded.

"Miss Ellen Greet at this table?"

"This is she," David nodded.

"I've a message for you, Miss Greet——"

"But I can't understand who would be——"

"Mr. Roger Mallard has seen you in the lobby and would like to meet you—out there."

"What?" cried Ellen, her amber eyes popping.

"Come along, Ellen," Mr. Barkley stood up. "I'll go out with you if you're going to be that shy about meeting him alone."

The girl, looking dazzled and bewildered, excitedly pushed back her chair.

"If Mr. Mallard wishes to meet Miss Greet," the little duchess now spoke up firmly to the page boy, "he may do so by coming here to our table."

It was all Mal could do not to applaud the chaperon's words.

The boy, scared out of his wits, hurried around the tree to stand, shaking in his boots, at Mal's table. He had seen the retiring Mr. Mallard occasionly when he delivered telegrams and ice cubes at his bungalow.

"How dare you misconstrue my message." Mal covertly passed the terrified boy a bill. "You were to hand my card to the lady's chaperon."

"Yes, sir," the boy quavered.

Stumbling over himself, he made haste to deliver the card which had covered the folded bill. And Mr. Mallard followed quickly on the heels of his card.

Mal had difficulty in suppressing his own mirth, so various and stupendous was the effect produced on the duchess' table. Yet he felt that if utter amazement hadn't held her captive she would have joined him in his desire for laughter. Mr. Barkley's countenance had grown as white as his napkin, while those of his companions in mischief, due to their hanging jaws, resembled infants afflicted with adenoids. Miss Ellen Greet, frozen to her chair, looked as Elaine probably looked the first time she laid eyes on Sir Lancelot.

Mal bowed to the little duchess, who was now biting the lips he admired.

The Ice Is Broken.

"Madam, will you forgive my outrageous boldness, but——" his disarming smile, which few could resist, flashed around the table, passing by round-eyed Ellen, to rest again on Miss Wyeth's incredulous face, "the provocation was great."

"Perhaps my friend Mr. Barkley will be good enough to introduce me."

David, who had become a doubting Thomas, rose and mumbled out the names. Naturally inattentive to names, Mal was inclined to trust to the rapier quickness of his eyes with the place cards, while he made his six bows.

"Miss Wyeth," he laughed, showing the white gleam of his teeth, "something tells me that perhaps Miss Greet—without doubt, Mr. Barkley—is uncertain whether she isn't being taken in by a crasher." He glanced down at Ellen who still sat transfixed with round eyes lifted to his. "My white hairs, camouflaged for my last production, have since become honest again, and—— Perhaps if one of you young ladies will lend me your eyebrow pencil and vanity mirror I can establish my identity."

Peg, responding ardently to his smile, was glad to accommodate him. And Mal, having expertly drawn a familiar dark line beneath each nostril, leaned against the table and gave a good imitation of Rip Van Winkle's plaintive wail: "Surely my dog will know me!"

He succeeded with his little act in breaking the ice. The young people were glad of a chance to roar at last. All save Mr. Barkley, Mal noticed, as he borrowed David's napkin to dip a corner of it in a goblet and wipe off the distinguished mustache.

"If you are alone, Mr. Mallard," Miss Wyeth dared and looked at him as if she were trying to identify a ghost, "won't you join our party?"

Mr. Mallard smilingly assured her that nothing would give him greater pleasure, providing he might have the honor of ordering the champagne. A more than interested waiter quickly brought an extra chair, which Mal maneuvered next to Miss Wyeth's.

Court Criticizes Barrymore Case

Los Angeles, Sept. 8 (AP).—Settlement of the late "Ariel-Caliban" romance of John Barrymore and Elaine Barrie was criticized in Superior Court here today as the film actor won another delay in his accounting suit against Henry Hotchener, his former business manager.

Dr. Donald J. Frick told Judge Goodwin J. Knight that Barrymore's health was so precarious that it would be dangerous for him to come into court.

Judge Knight said he would put over the case until September 29 reluctantly because of an affidavit filed by Hotchener charging the actor "had conferences with a certain woman and made an asserted final separation from her and a settlement regarding a valuable diamond engagement ring."

Miss Barrie, Barrymore's former protege, who last autumn pursued him half way across the continent, recently announced their romance was terminated, but that she would keep the ring he gave her.

Barrymore is suing for an accounting of about $100,000 in securities he charged Hotchener had, and for the return of books and private records.

$254,307 in U. S. Taxes Appealed by Ed Wynn

An income deficiency of $254,307 was appealed yesterday to the Board of Tax Appeals by Ed Wynn, The comedian.

Colorful Throng Attends Power Conference Ball

Wives of Cabinet Members Welcome Delegates From Many Nations; Affair Attracts Several Capital Sub-Debs.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The music for dancing blended with the music of many tongues, English hardly held its own in the large gathering where French, Italian, Spanish, German and other languages of the European and other continents were spoken more fluently.

Guests danced in the main ballroom and gathered on the balconies to watch the moving scene below. The Chinese room adjoining also was thrown open to accommodate the hundreds who attended.

Mrs. John Allan Dougherty was chairman of the entertainment committee which arranged the function.

In the receiving line were Mrs. William W. Howes, wife of the Acting Postmaster General; Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce; Mrs. Morris Llewellyn Cooke, Mrs. Benton McMillin, Mrs. Blair Banister and Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint, and Mrs. Stanley Reed, wife of the Solicitor General.

Mrs. William Standley, wife of Admiral Standley, chief of naval operations, who also was to have received, was unable to attend.

Mrs. Howes wore a becoming frock of orchid taffeta, over which she wore a coat of matching tulle. This was fashioned with full flowing sleeves and a square neckline, at which was caught a corsage of autumn violets. Petite Mrs. Swanson was costumed in a silver frock of simple design, the waist marked by a vivid green sash which was draped to the end of the slight train. Mrs. Roper was in pink satin, her gown fashioned with a large butterfly bow in the back and a flaring skirt. Mrs. Cooke's smartly severe gown was of crisp black taffeta. Mrs. Reed was in a flowered print.

Mrs. Ross wore white satin with hand-painted silver dots, a strand of pearls at her neck, pearl earrings and a black onyx bracelet. Mrs. McMillin's gown was a French model of black lace, close fitting at the hips and with a wide skirt forming a train. She wore with it green and yellow flowers at the belt and green slippers. Mrs. McMillin will be among the ladies assisting Mrs. Dougherty at the garden party tomorrow afternoon at the Robert Woods Bliss home in Georgetown.

Miss Mary Senate Howes, daughter of the Acting Postmaster General and Mrs. Howes, who was one of the sub-debutantes at the ball, wore a frock of white chiffon with an accordion plaited skirt which rippled gracefully as she danced.

Mlle. de Laboulaye Attends.

Another attractive young dancer who passed by was Mlle. Marie Therese de Laboulaye. She was wearing a bright printed frock with a soft white scarf draped across her shoulders and trailing down each side. In one of the larger boxes her parents, the Ambassador of France and Mme. de Laboulaye, the latter in black lace, looked on. Not far from them was the Ambassador of Belgium, Count Robert van der Straten-Ponthoz.

Also choosing a box in which to escape the crowd were the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera, who have recently returned. She wore a becoming gown of fuchsia chiffon shirred at the shoulders. His formal black and white attire was brightened by the many decorations across his chest.

A very interesting visitor here was Prof. Masawo Kamo, chief delegate from Japan, who has been in Washington before as the guest of his brother-in-law and sister, the former Ambassador of Japan and Mme. Debuchi. He was the center of a group of intent listeners. When asked about Takyo, he hastened to extend invitations for 1940 when the land of the Cherry Blossom celebrates its 2,600th anniversary as an empire under one dynasty.

From the Japanese Embassy were the Counselor and Mme. Yoshizawa, the latter in a smart black and white printed crepe, and with them were Capt. and Mme. Yanaghara.

Several of the men guests forsook the black and white for cool whites, among them Commissioner Melvin Hazen. The Minister of the Irish Free State was one of the first to arrive, and immediately he and the Minister of Denmark, Mr. Otto Wadsted, were engaged in a lively conversation.

The Minister of the Netherlands, Mr. Jonkheer H. M. van Haersma de With, and the Minister of Greece, Mr. Demetrios Sicillianos, were there greeting friends and introducing their countrymen.

Mr. Alexander Forward, of New York City, one of the Americans attending the conference, was accompanied to Washington yesterday by his daughter, the former Miss Virginia Forward, and her husband, Mr. Cyril Smith, of Washington and New York, to whom her marriage took place in New York July 10. They have been in Europe on their wedding trip and arrived in New York only last Tuesday aboard the Westerland.

Mr. and Mrs. George Belocovitch, another Washington couple who have been honeymooning in Europe and whom the Smiths were to have met in Paris, arrived in New York a few days ago aboard the Roma. The two couples did not make connections as they had planned, for the Smiths remained in England and Mr. Belocovitch and his bride, the former Miss Mary Louise Stafford, stayed in Italy.

Mrs. Smith last night wore a gown of yellow lace with a little jacket.

The Ambassador of Cuba Senor Dr. Guillermo Patterson y de Jauregui, who was there as was his charming daughter, Miss Olga Patterson, will entertain the Cuban delegates at luncheon today at the embassy. Three of the Cuban visitors are accompanied by their wives and one by his daughter. Mme. Francisco Gaston, wife of one, last evening wore a black gown figured in red flowers and with green at the neck and waistline.

The Minister Counselor of the Cuban Embassy and Mme. Baron were among the guests also, Mme. Baron wearing a chiffon gown flowered in rose and blue.

Miss Caroline Huston Thompson was there with Mr. John Farr Simmons, head of the visa division of the State Department.

Other guests were the Minister of Ecuador, Senor Capitan Colon Elroy Alfaro, who was accompanied by a party of guests; Mr. and Mrs. Cabot Stevens, she was wearing turquoise blue with a white cape of chiffon edged in ostrich feathers; Maj. and Mrs. Parker West, the latter in lemon chiffon, and Mrs. Dorothy Lee Ward, whose French gown of black lace and net had an effective halter neck of small pink rosebuds.

Among the members of the younger set present were Miss Marjorie Garland, who was wearing periwinkle crinkle satin; Miss Willoughby Patton in flowered chiffon; Miss Peggy DeMoll, in white with touches of emereld green; Miss Lynde Crocker, in a bright little printed frock; Miss Rhoda Jane Morris in red crepe, and Mrs. Frank Henry who was wearing a quaint gown of rose taffeta.

Mrs. T. W. Page And Daughters Return to City

Trio Spent Summer in West; Avoided Beaten Paths to 'Rough It.'

By Dudley Harmon.

Mrs. Thomas Walker Page and her two daughters, Mrs. Stephen Upson and Miss Rose Page, have returned to Washington from a summer's trip through the really wild West, or at least what's left of it. Avoiding the beaten track of most tourists, they went to smaller towns, where the real buckaroo, the 10-gallon hat and the silver cartwheel still flourish.

They spent a part of the summer near Carson City, Nev., where Mrs. Page's son, Thomas Walker Page 3d, is engaged in work as a mining engineer. Carson City, the capital of Nevada, is situated near beautiful Lake Tahoe. With only a few thousand inhabitants, life there is in complete contrast to the comparative formality of Washington. The accepted costume for street wear is riding breeches, high boots and a 10-gallon hat, and nobody ever thinks of dressing up. Miss Page and Mrs. Upson rode horseback over mountain trails nearly every day of their stay.

The Page family visited the famous Comstock Lode Mine while in the West. In recent years a ghost city, owing to its abandonment after the gold rush, it is now being built up again and developed. In one of the main bars there old relics of the early days remain, and gold filagreed cups and elaborate crystal chandeliers remain as witnesses of the years when those who had struck it rich attempted to bring a little elegance into Comstock. The Page sisters also went down into a mine shaft during their visit, and even tried their hand at drilling in the subterranean rock for gold.

From Carson City Mrs. Page and her two daughters went to San Francisco, where they have many friends, as Mr. Page, now a member of the United States Tariff Commission, was formerly a professor at the University of California. From San Francisco they returned home by motor, stopping at Yellowstone and Yosemite National parks en route. The only unpleasant part of their journey was when they motored through the desert while the thermometer registered 114 degrees.

Senorita Alfaro, Fiance Back From House Party

Return From Visit to William B. Kerkams' Summer Place in New Jersey; Will Be Married Two Weeks From Today.

By Marylyn Reeve.

Senorita Amelita Alfaro, daughter of the former Panamanian Minister and Senora de Alfaro, and her fiance, Mr. Frank Weller, have returned to Washington, after a gay and energetic house party at the William B. Kerkams' summer place near Spring Lake, N. J. With the expected swimming, boating and picnicking, there is quite enough to do, but the Junior Kerkams—she is the former Miss Bessie Gill—find it jolly to go over to the boardwalk with its variety of amusements and booths at nearby Asbury Park, so it is safe to say that there was at least one expedition of this sort during the house party.

Now, back in town again, the bride-elect, one of the few Diplomatic debutantes of recent years, is occupied with the plans and last-minute arrangements for her wedding which will take place two weeks from today. Little Senorita Yolande Alfaro is to be her sister's maid or honor. Senorita Olga Arosemena is sailing from her home in Panama within a few days and will reach here just in time to join in the round of parties. MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a modern young girl 19 years of age. I am and have been in love with a man eight years my senior. We have known each other 19 months and have been going together steadily for a year. I have an engagement ring and am awfully proud of it. I live in nearby Virginia and my sweetheart lives in Washington.

* * * *

Here is how things are! My sweetheart makes a small salary and if we marry I will have to work. I had a job making $12 weekly and our combined salaries averaged $24 a week. Don't you think that is enough for two to live on? David doesn't think so. He keeps putting our marriage off. He assures me always of his love, yet I doubt it, and I love him so terribly. If he really loved me, he ought to be able to see marriage on $24 a week. I lost my job and finally was convinced that it was best for us not to marry.

* * * *

Honestly, as far as marriage is concerned, the future looks blank. Here is the main thing: the only privacy we have is in David's apartment. Please understand that we do nothing we are ashamed of. David is trying to make me see that we can't marry for quite a while and sees no reason why we can't live together in his apartment. I live at home and have to give an excuse for everywhere I go. In a way, our living together would suit me perfectly, yet surely every girl has that little ache in her heart which forbids her to be a wife out of wedlock.

* * * *

I simply refused such an idea, yet when we are together I want to belong to him wholly. He realizes my answer is final, so we are drifting apart. I love David with all my heart and surely he must love me. The future looks so terribly empty without my adorable David. Would it be so terribly wrong to love that way, or must I go on with a broken heart?

BROKENHEARTED KAY.

Things to Consider.

DEAR BROKENHEARTED KAY: Dr. Alfred Adler, psychiatrist and internationally recognized authority on human relationships, holds that the boy who selfishly insists upon premarital relationships makes a poor husband. Why? Because, aside from the moral issues involved which we need not discuss, it is obvious he has no consideration for his feminine partner who, under present conditions, faces greater risks and penalties than the male in such a relationship. Dr. Adler also insists that most men, no matter how they may theorize on the subject, do not approve of premarital affairs for the woman they marry, even if they themselves are the sole recipient of her favor.

* * * *

In fairness to David, however, it is well to remind yourself that his invitation may be a direct outgrowth of your own actions and that in his mind, at least, it reflects your desires even more than his. Perhaps he would be just as reluctant as you to enter into such a hazardous relationship. But it is possible you have forced him to the conclusion that you simply cannot live without him, through going to his apartment time after time to be alone with him and in ardently advocating marriage when it is financially unfeasible. And so the alternate proposal.

* * * *

Since he cannot marry you, by no means live with him. The day might come when your need of his husbandly protection would be far more urgent than your present wish for it. And he would be in no better position to provide it than he is today. Then what? I quite agree with him that he cannot support a wife on $12 a week. I marvel that he maintains himself on that. And that, I gather, is his present income, for you say when you were earning $12 a week, before you lost your job, your combined incomes averaged $24 a week. Even that is not enough to live on, in the sense of making a home, rearing a family, and meeting financial emergencies.

* * * *

The size of the salary on which a couple starts housekeeping (providing it is sufficient to provide them with basic necessities) is not half so important as their prospect for the future. And a man of 27 who is making $12 a week, and a girl who has not yet proved her ability to find and hang on to a good job, can't be said to possess very bright prospects.

It is too bad that you two should be drifting apart only because you haven't enough money to marry on; but drifting apart is to be preferred to living together without benefit of clergy, as any unprejudiced adviser will tell you. M. H.

Bride Has Question.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Could you advise me as to what to wear, as a bride? I have invested in a white outfit: plain dress, hat, gloves and shoes—all in white. Do you think this is an appropriate color? My marriage is to be September 30. Gratefully yours. HELEN.

* * * *

DEAR HELEN: If you have already bought your bridal outfit, it is rather late in the day to be weighing the wisdom of your choice. However, if this is your first trip to the altar, you have chosen all right. White is the traditional color for a bride being married for the first time, regardless of the season which sees her married. If you are a widow, a costume in colors becoming to your complexion would have been more appropriate and more fashion right. If this is not your first marriage and if you have money to spend and wish to revise your choice, you might select a tailored fall costume or afternoon ensemble in one of the new browns, green or wine shades. It would not be an extravagance if you buy something which can be worn on other occasions for several seasons, as the white costume can be saved for next summer. M. H.

Mme. Yanagihara, of Japan, Surprised At Sign of Worry on Women's Faces Visitor to Power Parley Finds Us Otherwise Than She Expected.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

ON THE HEELS of her distinguished husband, a small, fashionably dressed woman with black eyes in almond-shaped settings and an enigmatic smile on her smooth face moves quickly and quietly from one meeting to another of the current World Power Conference.

"Who is she?" asks virtually every person who glimpses this lady of Eastern lineaments and Western attire. What is her interest in engineering feats? Why is she attending the conference? Does she speak English?

She is Mme. Hiromitsu Yanagihara, wife of one of Japan's outstanding engineers and the inspector in chief of the Japanese navy. She is attending the conference in an unofficial capacity. She understands English, but speaks it falteringly and prefers to let her husband talk for her.

Husband Interprets.

So in a secluded corner of the Mayflower lounge the interview proceeds with him serving as interpreter and proffering a few comments on his own initiative. She looks on. Occasionally her eyes disappear into little slits as she giggles at the questions put to her in his high-pitched voice. Again, a serious look pervades her face as she answers with quiet dignity and then listens intently as he translates her replies into English.

This is Mme. Yanagihara's first visit to America, he reveals. He has been here a number of times before. She has always wanted to come. They have been here two months, and she likes it better all the time. Wearing Western attire "just like American women" is an experience for her. In her own country she clings to traditional attire—the kimono and the obi.

American women are much as she expected them to be—fashionable, courteous and self-confident. But some have a worried look on their faces. Japanese women try always to be composed, try hard to keep from displaying their emotions and very rarely either frown or fuss. Unlike American women, they do not worry about growing old. Increasing years means increasing wisdom.

Few Follow Careers.

Yes, women in her country are coming out in public life and are establishing themselves in fields formerly filled entirely by men; but few of them are careerists in the Western sense. Most of them work outside the home only when it is absolutely necessary. Homemaking is still considered the Oriental woman's most pleasant and most satisfying career.

Mme. Yanagihara's time is so well taken up with her home, her three daughters and her welfare work, she would have difficulty following a career even if she wanted one—which she doesn't.

"Here, the housewife has so many kitchen conveniences and so many canned foods she can buy that meal planning and preparing take up very little of her time," says Mme. Yanagihara. "But in my country, several hours' work is involved in getting any meal ready. It makes a great difference."

Excellent Musician.

Then there are many other things to take of the Japanese housewife's time. Mme. Yanagihara, for example, is an excellent musician and is very proficient at the tea ceremony. Furthermore, she is accomplished at arranging flowers, having studied with one of Japan's best teachers in this field.

Each of her three daughters will be trained in the tea ceremony, flower arrangement, and, possibly, music. They will probably also find some time, as she does, to devote to welfare work and the study of world affairs.

Since her husband is naval inspector she is keenly interested in international relationships, but she is confident her country and the United States will never be involved in armed conflict with each other.

"Such a meeting as this will help to bring us close to all nations," she says, "and will allay many suspicions each may have had regarding the other."

On her first visit to America, Mme. Hiromitsu Yanaghira, wife of Japan's naval inspector - in-chief, is an unofficial visitor at the Third World Power Conference. So far, she has enjoyed most the opportunity to meet and talk with Western women, whom she finds "fashionable, courteous and self-confident."

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Sept. 8.

EVERY new grief that assaults the nervous and high-strung nations of the Old World is felt deeply, and even dangerously, in the huge foreign colonies that dot this astonishing town. Silences fall between old friends, politics suddenly becomes a taboo subject, and occasional violences explode between adherents of the various factions—over 3,000 miles from the European todentanz.

I dropped into one of the merriest of the Spanish colony's eating places a few nights ago and found it full of sadness and silence, broken only by the singing of its canaries. Factionists, of both camps are afraid to speak or to rejoice over a reported victory. Even husband and wife sometimes eat their meal in silence—which is something of a novelty. Into the Spanish church dedicated to Our Lady of Guadalupe I saw women streaming, there to pray for the safety of their relatives and friends in the homeland. Europe's tragedies become the tragedies of thousands of New Yorkers, and many of our happiest neighborhoods are plunged in deepest gloom.

ALICE HUGHES.

Ginger Rogers, like all her sisters of the cinema, devoted much of her New York holiday to laying in a stock of nifty new raiment against the fall social season in dear old Hollywood. The pink-haired Rogers spent a lot of time, and not a little cash, in the sewing parlor of Sister Muriel King, who got back from a Mexican holiday in time to do a bit of cutting and basting for Ginger.

* * * *

I saw three of the little numbers the girl acquired. One is in apricot which pretty much matches the Rogers thatch, a second is a brown lace evening dress over pale blue, and the third is a chocolate brown street suit.. Sister King says it is a right smart pleasure to dress a girl with as cute a figger as Freddy Astaire's agile dance-partner's.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—One by one our pet bachelors get knocked off the limb—as has been the way of this silly world for centuries. The eager girls who lunch religiously at the Algonquin are now weeping quietly into their consomme over the loss of Robert Nathan, poet and novelist, who has just been spliced to Mrs. Lucie-Lee Hall Skelding, widow of a New York banker. . . .

* * * *

Speaking of town eligibles, our leading man-about-town, William Rhinelander Stewart, now denies to the press that a marriage has been arranged (as the London Morning Post puts it) and will shortly take place between himself and the beauteous blonde Janet Newbold Ryan, once Washington's ace glamour girl. Willie, it appears, is still playing the field—though he is often seen round and about with the lovely Janet . . .

* * * *

The perfume-selling by "expressmen" on the streets of this town continues to be a leading racket, in spite of its great age. Every now and then one of these high-binders draws up beside my parked flivver and mutters "Could you use a bottle of good perfume, lady? Cost $25 retail—but I could let you have it for $5!" Most of the town girls are on to this skullduggery, but the petty racketeers still snag an occasional customer—and the stuff is just as apt as not to be slightly sweet-scented water . . .

* * * *

Come weal, come woe, Britain always manages to ship us one beautiful racqueteer for the national championships at our Forest Hills, out on Long Island. This year the Old Country ferried over the lovely Kay Stammers, England's No. 2 lady player, and as easy on the eyes as she is handy with the tennis bat.

Social Graces Basically Same As Years Ago

By Alice Clarissa Richmond

MANNERS are a sign of social adjustment, and should be taught to children, not as symbols of refinement, but as a means of social intercourse. They are the oil which makes the wheels of society move smoothly. The touch-stone of good breeding is "Am I acting toward others as I should like to have them act toward me?"

Of course it is a good place to know what to wear and how, what fork or spoon to use at table, how to set a table, whether to bow or shake hands on meeting people. But these details vary from place to place and from time to time.

The lady or gentleman of 50 years ago, suddenly set down in a modern drawing room, would make many small mistakes, but would never be mistaken for an ill-bred boor. The thought for others taught a really well-bred person, would carry him through any situation.

In teaching manners to little children, only the basic principles are necessary. The frills can take care of themselves when the child is old enough to notice the current fads of the moment. Salad forks may go out of fashion, the question of whether one may not use a knife for salad may be settled either way, a new implement for special eating may be invented any day, but never will it be permissible to eat with one's mouth open, or drink water before wiping one's lips.

Much of what a child learns he learns unconsciously from imitating those about him. Only a certain amount can be taught him directly.

If his parents and teachers sincerely try to put themselves into the other man's place and to consider the feelings of those about them, much of the nagging which teaching manners generally consists of will be unnecessary.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"I'M an incorrigible putter-on of airs," sighed the mother of two little snub noses. "So I get what's coming to me when they come tricycling in on tea parties I've taken such pains to have dainty. They never manage to get out without spilling somebody's tea or rolling over somebody's toe. They don't mean a thing by it . . . they're just boys. But I should resign trying to do anything but stand by with mercurochrome in one hand and a roll of sticking plaster in the other."

Well, it's not as bad as that. Besides one consolation is that children are quite the style these days . . . so the chances are that most of the guests are thinking more about how lucky that lady is than about stray spills and collisions.

But we know one mother of one noisy pair who has quite a stunning drawing room that is more or less boy proof. She selected the most practical of colors—beige—and instead of using this here and there in the usual neutral way which usually ends up in a very dull sort of effect, she made the room predominantly beige. She had a figured rug that created a rather beige impression . . . she did the walls over in a beige of this same general tone, had draperies and glass curtains to match, then selected upholstery materials in practically the same shade. Accessories, lamps and tea set were in a vivid shade of Chinese blue—the only color contrast.

FAVORITE FOODS of FAMOUS FOLK

Mrs. Cordell Hull Noted for Her Buttermilk Corn Bread.

By Pattie Ellicott.

FOREIGN war complications have kept Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull in Washington for most of the summer. Their many friends have enjoyed this opportunity to fete them and the Hulls have entertained informally a great deal as well.

After a hard day at his desk in the Department of State the Secretary delights in a home-cooked dinner replete with Tennessee dainties and dishes dear to him since childhood.

When he comes home and finds buttermilk corn bread part of the menu his smile becomes broader for the Hull cook under Mrs. Hull's skilled direction can make this Southern delicacy to a king's taste.

It is made as follows:

Buttermilk Corn Bread.

1 pint fine cornmeal
1 pint buttermilk
2 eggs
1 teaspoon soda
2 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon sugar
1 tablespoon salt
1 tablespoon cold water

Mix meal, salt, sugar, butter and buttermilk together in bowl, put in double boiler over hot water, cook 15 minutes, stirring often. Turn mixture in a bowl to cool. Set the bowl in cold water if in a hurry.

When cold, add well-beaten eggs. Dissolve soda in water, add to mixture, beat well. Turn in hot, well-greased biscuit pan. Bake about 20 minutes.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

Dementia Paralytica.

When a man or woman "goes off" mentally every friend and acquaintance stands aghast at the seeming hopelessness of the situation. We know some of the factors involved, but just what pulls the trigger is an enigma in many cases.

There are, however, a few types of mental aberration that are due to organic disease and one such is known as paresis or dementia paralytica. Syphilis is responsible and we may judge of its devastating influence when we realize that from 10 to 20 per cent of all persons admitted to hospitals for mental disease are suffering from the disease. Here is a case taken from real life:

One of the outstanding features is the inability of the patient to realize that he is ill or that anything is wrong. During the period of its full development the symptoms may mimic almost any type of mental upset. If allowed to have his own way the patient may draw out every dollar he has in the bank and invest in blue sky schemes. He may exhbit delusions of grandeur or superiority in which he portrays himself as the savior of mankind.

This period of elation (which is not always evident) is generally succeeded by one of depression, in which the victim may claim that his blood has ceased to circulate and that his body is dead. Sooner or later convulsive seizures will come on, although they may not occur frequently. Finally, a vacant expression will pervade the countenance with a smoothing out of the features so that the individual may appear actually younger.

Despite the severity of the symptoms, some of these patients recover so that they are able to resume their former employment, while others may live on for many years.

Few if any of these patients should be managed at home. They require institutional care, as many will develop delirium with a tendency to destructiveness. Untreated cases become progressively weaker, gradually drifting into paralysis and imbecility.

An early, thorough and persistent attack upon syphilis will—in most instances—so arrest the progress of the disease that the possibility of dementia paralytica need not be feared. Should paresis develop, artificial fever is the treatment of choice.

Guests Who Are on Diets Present Problem to Hostesses.

By Margaret Wallace.

THE HOSTESS with family and friends who are following diets, does really have her menu problems. One Washington woman who has a pretty garden and terrace and has tried to pay off some of her dinner and luncheon obligations this summer has found this out. She has discovered that often her guests have taken advantage of the summer lull in dinners and luncheons, go on diets. She writes:

DEAR MISS WALLACE: I have been giving a series of luncheons on my terrace in hope of repaying my social obligations. All of my guests seem to be reducing or under doctors' orders and some of my food has not been touched at these parties. You know this is distressing to a hostess. I did not expect to have much trouble at the dinners because my women guests were luckily quite slender and healthy. But the men! One could not eat meat and another could not eat anything with starch in it. Is it polite for guests to refuse food at a dinner and state that they are on a diet? My greatest problem is a husband and wife whom I have invited to a dinner next week. They are on a banana and buttermilk diet. My husband insists that persons on a diet should not accept formal dinner invitations.

Seclusion for Dieters.

Your husband is right. Persons on diets should not accept formal dinner invitations unless they can eat food served them. If a man is not eating meat, he should allow himself to be served the meat with the other food. He need not eat it. Persons who cannot eat starch should also allow themselves to be served with such foods even though they do not consume them. The tactful hostess will ask no questions. Of course there is no solution to the problem of those on banana and milk diets at a formal dinner. They should either send regrets or come off their diets for the occasion. It is very rude to talk about the food one can eat or cannot eat at any dinner.

Satins Are Favored.

New York, (AP).—Satins with rich lustrous finish are many designers' favorites and are being used this fall for afternoon and evening frocks and blouses. Rayon makes a number of smart fall fabrics for those utilitarian all-day frocks which American business women need. They come in jacquard weaves (giving the effect of brocade) and in rough cloque and matelasse effects as well as smoother surfaced materials.

Rice Pudding Recipe Wins Post First Prize

OLD-FASHIONED RICE PUDDING is still a favorite dessert, according to the number of recipes submitted for this dish in The Post's recent contest for rice dishes. Spanish rice and rice with cheese were among the other leading favorites.

Rice Apple Dumplings With Wine Sauce.

2 tablespoons butter
2 beaten eggs
1 teaspoon salt
Apples
Cinnamon or nutmeg

Dip squares of muslin, one at a time, into boiling water, dredge with flour and spread on each 2 heaping tablespoons rice mixture. Place in center a peeled, cored apple; in cavity left by removing of core put currant jelly and sugar. Sprinkle cinnamon or nutmeg over apple; draw corners of cloth closely together, fasten with pins and steam one-half hour. Serve with sauce.

Wine Sauce.

3 eggs
1½ cups powdered sugar
½ cup cream
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup Madeira wine

Beat egg yolks, add wine, sugar, cream and vanilla. Blend into stiffly beaten egg whites.

Persian Rice.

2 cups uncooked rice
2 or more tablespoons butter
¼ pound pine nuts or broken pecans
3 or 4 onions, according to size
¾ pound seedless raisins
Salt to taste
Cinnamon for sprinkling
Minced chicken, veal or lamb (of desired)

Wash the rice thoroughly in several waters to remove every trace of starch. About 1 gallon of boiling salted water will be required to boil the 2 cups of raw rice. Add the rice to the water gradually and boil until tender, about 15 to 25 minutes. Loosen the rice occasionally with a fork to prevent sticking to the pan. When cooked pour into colander and run hot water through it to wash off extra starch. Drain thoroughly.

Slice one onion and fry gently in butter. When partially cooked, add the nuts and raisins and continue cooking until the raisins puff.

Butter a large casserole and line the bottom and sides with a layer of sliced onions. Spread one half of the cooked rice over the bottom, then the raisin, nut and fried onion mixture, with the minced meat if you decide to use it. Season this layer with cinnamon and a little salt. Cover with remainder of rice and sprinkle top with cinnamon.

With a knife pierce the mixture to the bottom in three places, and into each hole pour a tablespoon of boiling water. Cover dish and put into hot oven for 5 minutes, then reduce heat to moderate and bake slowly for an hour longer.

Serve hot as a vegetable or main dish. When serving bring up some of the bottom crust of onion with each portion. This serves 10 generously.

Fu Manchu Cookies.

1 cup cooked rice
¼ cup shredded preserved ginger
1-3 cup butter
1 cup brown sugar, packed
1 teaspoon pistachio flavoring
2 eggs
1½ cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1-3 teaspoon salt
1-3 teaspoon mace

The success of these cookies depends on the cooking of the rice. It should be cooked in covered boiling water for about 20 minutes, without stirring. When the grains begin to swell and water thickens slightly, take cover off and pour off the water. Set pan in oven for about ten minutes. Do not brown, but simply dry. The kernels will be whole and separate.

Cream the butter and sugar together, add beaten eggs, then rice, nuts and flavoring. Measure the sifted flour and resift with salt, mace and baking powder. Add half the dry ingredients to first mixture.

Beat only to blend well, then fold in rest of flour and drop from teaspoon on to an oiled cookie pan and bake at 350 degrees F. about 15 minutes.

Japanese Salad.

Cook until tender, dry and white, one-half cup rice. While hot, toss lightly into rice French dressing made as follows:

4 tablespoons oil
1 tablespoon vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
A dash of paprika

Rub well together, salt, pepper and paprika in a dish with a small piece of ice. Add oil, then vinegar; mix well and beat until thick.

Add 3 hard-cooked eggs put through a vegetable ricer or chopped. Add 1 tablespoon each chopped red and green pepper and 1 tablespoon chopped onion washed in a piece of muslin. When cool add 1 tablespoon chopped parsley. Place on lettuce leaves and garnish with shredded beets.

The last of the three $1 prizes goes to Miss Laura V. Jones, Leonardtown, Md. Her recipe follows:

Chicken Rice Loaf.

1 (4½ pound) dressed stewing fowl
1 cup washed rice
1 teaspoon salt
Parsley
Stuffed olives

Disjoint fowl into 2 thighs, 2 drumsticks, 2 wings, 2 or 3 pieces breast, 2 or 3 pieces back. Wash through several waters. Place in stewing pan and cover with hot water. Add 1 teaspoon of salt and let the chicken simmer until the meat is tender. Remove the pieces of chicken from the broth and strain it. Let it come to a rolling boil, and cook 1 cup of washed rice in it, letting the liquid evaporate so the rice grains will be dry and white.

While the rice is cooking, remove the chicken meat from the bones, and put it through a food chopper. Into a buttered deep loaf pan, put a half inch layer of rice, packing it in quite firmly. Then arrange a layer of minced chicken, another layer of rice, another layer of chicken and finally a layer of rice on top. If the loaf is to be served hot, set it in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) for 20 minutes. If it is to be served cold, set it into the refrigerator for 1 hour. When ready to serve, unmold the loaf on a platter and garnish with parsley and stuffed olives (or a ring of buttered peas and carrots). Some of the broth may be reserved for making gravy instead of using all of it for cooking the rice.

Home-Made Tomato Juice Worth Effort

May Be Stored for Winter; Preserves or Pickles Recipes Given.

By Dorothea Duncan.

GARDEN tomatoes are hanging heavily on the vines and should be canned, preserved or pickled immediately lest a sudden frost ruin the crop.

Fully ripe tomatoes make delicious juice that may be bottled and stored for next winter's menus. If you do not like to bother with canning or preserving, you might make juice of the tomatoes in your garden for it is a simple procedure and one that is worth the little time and effort it takes. Home-made tomato juice is delicious and it can be served as a beverage or in soups and numerous other cooked dishes during the cold weather.

D. DUNCAN.

Use the following procedure for preparing tomato juice: Wash ripe tomatoes. Be sure that all soft spots are removed. Then quarter fruit and place it in a preserving kettle without water. Place over the heat, but be sure that the heat is not too strong lest the tomatoes scorch before the juice starts to flow. When the juice flows freely and the tomato quarters lose their shape remove kettle from the stove. Strain the pulp and juice through fine cheesecloth which has been placed in a sieve. Press pulp so that everything but skin and seeds are permitted to pass through the cloth. Heat the juice to boiling pour into clean, hot jars and seal. One-half teaspoon of salt may be added to each quart of tomato juice.

Other recipes for preparing ripe tomatoes follow:

Chili Sauce.

12 large tomatoes
2 large onions
4 green peppers
2 tablespoons salt
2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon cinnamon
2½ cups vinegar

Peel the tomatoes and onions and chop them fine. Chop the peppers very fine. Stir all together, and add salt, sugar, cinnamon and vinegar. Boil for one hour, stirring well, and seal in clean, hot jars. This sauce gives a delicious zest to any kind of meat.

Tomato Chutney.

4 pounds ripe tomatoes
1 pound pared, chopped apples
3 onions, chopped fine
1 pint strong vinegar
2 tablespoons salt
2 cups brown sugar
1 cup seeded raisins
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon mustard
½ teaspoon cayenne

Chop the vegetables and then the apples. Combine the ingredients and cook until the chutney is thick and clear. Seal it in hot, clean jars.

Tomato Puree.

1 gallon tomatoes
1 small onion, sliced
1 stalk celery or celery leaves
1 bay leaf
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon paprika

Cook the mixture until the tomatoes are tender and put it through a strainer. Boil the pulp until it is reduced to one-half the original volume. Seal it in clean, hot jars.

And here are two recipes that will take care of any green tomatoes on your vines that won't have a chance to ripen.

Old Virginia Catsup.

1 peck green tomatoes
½ peck white onions
3 ounces white mustard seed
1 ounce allspice
1 pound brown sugar
1 ounce cloves
½ cup dry mustard
¼ cup water
1 ounce black pepper
1 ounce celery seed
Vinegar

Chop the tomatoes and onions, sprinkle with salt, and let stand three hours. Drain well and put the pulp in a preserving kettle with the other ingredients. Cover with vinegar, and boil slowly for one hour. Seal in clean, hot jars. Less mustard may be used if a less hot catsup is desired.

Green Tomato Pickle.

Wash and cut up 1 peck of green tomatoes, slice thin 2 quarts white onions, put in stone jar and salt, let stand overnight. The next day turn in a colander and drain. Put in porcelain kettle with 1 quart vinegar and 1 quart water and cook over moderate fire. Allow tomatoes and onions to simmer until clear and tender. Again turn in colander and drain. Put 2 quarts vinegar in a kettle with 2 pounds brown sugar, ½ pound white mustard seed, 1 tablespoons each of ground pepper, allspice, cloves, celery seed. Heat slowly to a boil. Meanwhile mix together a teaspoon of tumeric, ½ teaspoon cayenne pepper, and ½ teaspoon ground mustard. Stir into the vinegar and pour over the pickle. Mix carefully with a wooden spoon. Lastly add 1 teacup of best salad oil. Set aside until cool, then put in jars or crocks.

For other pickle recipes send a stamp to Dorothea Duncan, in care of The Washington Post, for her bulletin which contains eleven pickle recipes, five of which won prizes in a recent Post recipe contest.

Cottage Cheese Variations Add Zest to Summer Menu

As Croquette Ingredient or in Mold It Quicky Restores Itself to Favor if Previously Over done as Salad.

Someone has said that "Bread is the staff of life." This is only a half truth, for sugar is really the substance that the body utilizes for energy and heat. To be sure, digestion converts bread—or most of it—into sugar, but unless starchy foods reach this "sweet state" they cannot be used by the body.

Of course other types of food can produce sugar, such as meat, fish, eggs, and fat. There is one drawback, however. If starches are not eaten these substances are not digested completely and poisonous acids are formed—with damage to health. It must be made perfectly clear that if starches alone were responsible for diabetes we could omit them and exist on fats and proteins. Unfortunately the diabetic who tried this plan would find himself in a state known as acidosis, which—sooner or later—would bring on unconsciousness and perhaps death.

In the normal individual the pancreas secrets just as much insulin as the body seems to need—a definite proportion in relation to the amount of starch that is eaten—but in diabetes this function of the gland is reduced or lost and, therefore, the secretion must be supplied artificially. The remedy is, therefore, simple. It means restricting carbohydrates to the point where the patient's own insulin is adequate or, if there is a sizable failure of this hormone, supplying it from an outside source and administering it under the skin.

Court Upholds Rule Prorating Farm Products

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Sept. 8.—Federal District Judge Leon R. Yankwich today upheld provisions of the invalidated AAA under which prorating of farm products to markets is authorized.

Judge Yankwich, a recent appointee of President Roosevelt's, granted a permanent injunction against Hugh Edwards' shipping citrus products in violation of the Agricultural Adjustment Administraton's regulations for California, Arizona and Nevada.

A spokesman for the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, the largest citrus co-operative, said the decision is "reassuring inasmuch as it provides for orderly marketing on an industry-wide basis."

The Government contended that the Supreme Court's Hoosac Mills case decision outlawing the processing tax provisions of the AAA had not affected the sections which give the Government the right to set up contracts between the Secretary of Agriculture and the growers in order to effect a marketing program.

Counsel for the defense asserted the Hoosac Mills decision had thrown out all of the AAA.

"In the United States particularly," said Judge Yankwich, "the efforts toward economic recovery have been directed toward establishing a stable price structure that would encourage and thus restore the unbalanced economic life.

"To deny to Congress its plenary power over commerce upon the presumption that in some indirect way such a control may induce persons to increase production voluntarily would, if carried to its ultimate conclusion, cripple and destroy the power."

Erwin Haas, attorney for Edwards, and attorneys for the Government indicated they would take the case to the United States Supreme Court for a decision on the question of the constitutionality of the AAA marketing provisions.

'Holding the Bag' Was Coined By Jefferson, Says Dictionary

'American English' Lexicon Credits George Washington With First Using Noun 'Average' as Verb; Mark Twain Aided Language of U. S.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 8.—Thomas Jefferson was cited today as the originator of that oft-borrowed phrase—"holding the bag."

The new Dictionary of American English credited him with first using it in a letter in 1793.

Jefferson, too, was named the coiner of the word "Americanism." Back in 1797—the same year that John Jay contributed "Americanize" to the language.

George Washington was mentioned as the first to use the noun "average" as a verb in the volume, described as the most comprehensive of its kind and devoted to words and phrases which apparently originated or gained usage in the United States.

Work on the dictionary has been in progress since 1926 under direction of the lexicographer, Sir William Craigie. Words from "a" to "baggage" were included in the first section of 116 pages, published today by the University of Chicago Press. Nineteen more sections were scheduled to follow within the next five years.

Slang was excluded except where it was part of the accepted language of a period. The book was restricted to words in use before 1900.

Mark Twain and Harriet Beecher Stowe were listed as "prolific founts of American words." The word detectives delved into the books of obscure authors, old magazines, mellowed newspaper.

Rooted in historic issues they found such words as "abolition," "Africanize," "amendment," "annexation."

They concluded Americans "played fast and loose" with some of the king's English. "Awful" was twisted from its original sense of "awe-inspiring" to such meanings as "unpleasant" and "ugly" and employed as the equivalent of "very."

"Around" was substituted betimes for "approximately" in "around 3 o'clock" and for "revive" in "to come around."

Frontier life was reflected in many uses of "back" in compound words, such as "back woods," "back log," "back pay" and "back fire."

The editors dug out "ain't," studied it for a while, then tossed it back into the laps of the English.

Reich Plane Leaves Azores on Survey

New York, Sept. 8 (AP).—The German flying boat Aeolus, making an exploratory flight over the southern route of the North Atlantic, radioed Pan American Airways tonight it took off from the Azores for Port Washington, N. Y., at 2:21 a. m. Greenwich mean time (9:21 Eastern standard time).

The take-off proper was made from the ship Schwabenland, anchored near the city of Horta.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Samuel Lubell.

A. F. G. E. Poll.

We've just completed a Presidential poll of the delegates to the Detroit convention from 42 of the A. F. G. E. lodges in the District (we couldn't reach 3 and omitted the suspended Panama Canal and Justice lodges).

These are the results:

For Col. Stengle, 40 votes.

Two lodges not voting.

Of the "doubtful" votes, however, 5 are to be decided by meetings to be held this week; 9 or 10 are fairly definitely conservative with leanings toward Stengle; while the remaining 5 or 6 are "open-minded." It is also a safe conclusion that the Civil Service Commission's 4 votes will go to Stengle eventually—perhaps even before the first ballot.

Boiling down these figures Col. Stengle seems assured of 44 votes from District delegates with 10 to 15 extra votes likely should he be the only conservative candidate. The "progressives" on the other hand will muster 19 certain votes in the District and stand a fair chance of picking up 5 or 6 "open-minded" votes.

The two lodges who are sending neither delegates nor proxies are Postoffice, No. 105, and Liberty Loan Annex, No. 132. Five of the lodges we polled are sending proxies, National Bureau of Standards through Capt. Thomas Breslin, of Public Buildings and Parks; Translators through State Department whose delegate is still to be named; Colored Navy Yard, through George Rycraw, of Interdepartmental District; National Zoo, through James G. Yaden, of Civil Service Commission; District Jail, through John Dwyer, of A. A. A.

Lodges we were unable to reach were the three units at St. Elizabeth's who, we have been told, are sending a single delegation, Elevator Operators and Bolling Field. With few exceptions delegations are going uninstructed.

John Arthur Shaw, former president of A. F. G. E., writes to disagree "emphatically" with our statement that the proposed organization of non-civil service employes would be dedicated to oppose the extension of the merit system Shaw, who has proposed such an organization, insists its function would be the "exact reverse."

Power Exhibits

At the Mayflower, it was the Bureau of Mines display that pleased us most. There was a model of an oil drill and a revolving rack containing samples of 120 different kinds of American crude oil. They also had a helium-filled balloon to illustrate the terrific drop in price in helium—$400,000 worth of helium can now be had for $2—and as we went past we gave the balloon a tug.

Next to the mines exhibit we liked the "running water" display in the Edison Institute. The "running water" is not water at all but a spirally twisted wire that is revolved about so rapidly it looks like water coming out of a faucet.

Over at the National Museum the War Department Engineer Corps has an impressive exhibit of the new Bonneville Dam it is constructing. Be sure to ask to see the salmon elevator. The Geological Survey's river measuring exhibit makes funny noises, but what impressed us most was the Rural Electrification Administration's before and after diorama of the value of cheap electricity.

Justin W. Macklin, first assistant patent commissioner, is yachting on Lake Erie with his wife and two daughters . . . Birthday greetings to Julia D. Brew, Mrs. Alberta B. Hill, Enoch R. Matthews, Henson C. Thompson and Mrs. Pearl E. Varble, of the adjutant general's office of the War Department . . . Add things we never knew till now, 75 foreign countries are co-operating with the Identification Division of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in exchanging fingerprints.

Chemistry Meeting

Scientists from nine Government agencies will deliver papers before the ninety-second meeting of the American Chemical Society being held this week at Pittsburgh. We ran through the list of their papers for some ominous-sounding subject and discovered only one, "the variations of acid content of whisky with age and dilution," by Arthur D. Etienne, of the Treasury, and S. T. Schicktanz, of the Bureau of Standards.

A number of the scientists are delivering more than one paper. There are two four-paper men, Bernard Lewis and Guenther von Elber, of the Bureau of Mines, and three triple-threat scientists, C. L. Hudson, of the National Institute of Health, and K. D. Jacob and W. D. Ross, both Agriculture. Frederick D. Rossini, of Standards, will preside at the thermal chemistry section Friday.

The fair sex is represented by Florence B. King, Mildred Sherman and Gladys Leavell, of Agriculture, and Mary E. Maver, of the National Institute of Health.

We listed the agriculture scientists going to the meeting last week. The next largest delegation is from the Bureau of Mines, R. G. Atkinson, R. G. Brewer, W. C. Schroeder, A. A. Berk, A. Gabriel, Oliver C. Ralston, P. S. Roller, L. D. Schmidt, J. L. Elder, J. D. Davis, L. L. Hirst, I. I. Pinkel, G. W. Jones, G. S. Scott, H. H. Schrenk, W. P. Yant, Reinhardt Thiessen, G. C. Sprunk, Joseph D. White and Frank W. Rose, jr.

From the Bureau of Standards: G. M. Kline, B. M. Axilrod, Beveridge J. Mair, Horace S. Isbell and W. W. Pigman, R. T. Leslie and Charles B. Willingham; from the Bureau of Fisheries, Lyle Anderson, Leslie Lowen and Roger W. Harrison; from the Tennessee Valley Authority, J. H. Pearson, J. C. Brosheer, R. L. Copson, R. H. Newton and J. D. Lindsay; from Public Health Service and National Institute of Health, Ernest L. Jackson, Nelson K. Richtmyer, Carl Voetglin, and R. R. Sayers, of the Public Health Service, and Joseph J. Fahey, of the Geological Survey.

Colladay Unit Gains G. O. P. Recognition

Rover Group Ousted by Ruling of National Committee.

Organization Headed by Wilkes Held Official Arm of Party.

The victory of the Colladay group over the Rover faction in local Republican politics was complete last night.

In a meeting at Chicago yesterday, the executive committee of the Republican National Committee adopted a resolution designating the Republican State Committee in and for the District of Columbia headed by James C. Wilkes, chairman, and Clyde D. Garrett, secretary, as the official arm of the national organization in this city.

Wilkes and Garrett are allies of Edward F. Colladay, Republican National Committeeman for the District of Columbia. They were named to their present posts last May when the local Republican organization split into two factions, one led by Colladay and the other by former United States Attorney Leo A. Rover.

Each group held its own local convention. Each sent a slate of delegates and officers to the Republican National Convention in Cleveland. There the Colladay group won every round in the battle. The Colladay delegates were seated and Colladay and Mrs. Virginia White Speel were named national committeeman and national committeewoman, respectively, for the District.

Colladay, appearing before the National Committee in Cleveland, offered a resolution designating the State committee headed by Wilkes and Garrett as the officially recognized committee for the District. Chairman John D. M. Hamilton referred the resolution to the executive committee for future action.

It was this resolution that the executive committee adopted yesterday after National Committeeman Colladay had appeared to speak in favor of it. Rover did not appear.

State Chairman Wilkes, advised of the committee's action by Colladay from Chicago, said:

"The course adopted by the national executive committee, though what was expected, is most gratifying. It is in line with Chairman Hamilton's direction to us to carry on the party work here, as we have been doing through our campaign club and voters' bureau at 1413 H street northwest, and it will serve to settle any technical details of the record as to our committee's being the official branch of the national party in this district."

The breach in the local organization, opened by the factional fight in May, has not yet been closed, it was learned yesterday, many of those who sided with Rover being determined to renew the fight for control four years hence.

The Rover followers accused Colladay of trying to "dominate" the local organization. Colladay in turn accused the Rover faction of using "Tammany-like tactics" to end his control.

However, whatever bitterness remains as a result of the split, both factions are working for the success of the Landon-Knox ticket. Rover has made some speeches in Maryland for the ticket and plans to make some more, but under auspices of the Republican National Committee.

The Absentee Voters Bureau, set up last March in the National Capital Republican Club at Scott Circle, is working along with the voters bureau on H street to round up all Landon votes in the city.

Personal Tax Dodgers Beware! City to Loose Inspector Crew

If you didn't file a sworn personal proprty tax statement during July—and the odds are about 4 to 1 that you didn't—you'd better put the Rembrandt collection in a secret closet and have your crew get the steam yacht away from Washington waters—the personal property tax inspectors are coming.

The law provides that every resident of the District file a sworn statement with the tax assessor's office listing the value of his personal belongings. If you're just a private citizen and don't run a store or an office, this means that you give the value of your household furniture, your stocks and bonds, your wife's diamond ring and your luxuriously furnished yacht on the Potomac. There is also a space on the pink form for you to evaluate any harness, robes, blankets and stable supplies you may possess.

According to District Tax Assessor Fred D. Allen, only about 38,000 such returns were filed last July. In a lot of these cases, an entire family was included on the same form, but even so, the total representse but a fraction of th city's residents.

During this month personal and real estate taxes for he first half of the fiscal year 1937—which began July 1—are payable at the office of District Tax Collector C. M. Towers. Checks already have started coming in and he estimates that by the end o fthe month he will have received $1,000,000 in personal property taxes alone.

If you're a newcomer to Washington and don't own any real estate your only wory is the personal tax. Here's how the District goes about collecting that.

In July of each year all residents are asked to file personal tax returns with the assessor. Everybody is supposed to file these, even if his only property is the colthing on his back. There is an exemption of $1,000 on household and other personal belongings, and several other special exemption.

The assessor and his staff go over these and figure how much you owe the District government. The present tax rate is $1.50 per $100 value of tangible property, such as jewelry or household furniture and 50 cents per $100 value of intangible property, such as stocks and bonds or money in the bank.

In late August and early September the assessor puts the personal tax bills in the mail. Unless it is found that you owe the District at least 50 cents no attempt is made to collect, as the expense of collection would be greater than the return.

You can pay the bill in two installments. That for the first half of the year is due at the end of September. If it is not paid then, a penalty of 1 per cent of the amount is imposed and additional 1 per cent penalties are added the first of each succeeding month the tax remains unpaid.

From all tax sources last year, these apparently insignificant penalties brought $500,000 into the District coffers.

When the period for 1937 tax payment has expired at the end of next March, Tax Collector Towers organizes his forces and goes after the delinquents. He has a staff of 25 young men who work most of the year trying to get the iDstrict its due.

If, after several calls from a tax collector, you flatly refuse to pay, the authorities take steps to make you do so. The most common method is to seize some piece of property and impound it. If you don't pay, the property is sold.

Many times, of course, delinquent taxpayers leave the city. When that happens, there's not much the officials can do. They just list the amount of uncollectable taxes.

Meanwhile, the asser's office is at work trying to locate persons who didn't file personal tax returns. He has a staff of ten inspectors—young men with good legs and wind, and a keen sense of values.

If you're one of those who didn't file a return, one of these inspectors will be ringing your doorbell before long. He'll find out how many rooms you have and how many persons live there. And he'll give your furniture a close scrutinizing glance. Then he'll go in and make a report to the board of assessors.

If, after consideration of the report, the Board of Assessors believes that you owe enough tax to make collection worth while it can do either one of two things to make you pay. It can obtain a writ of mandamus ordering you to file a return or it can make out a tentative assessment against your property.

Monroe Street Citizens Renew Fight on Buses

Like Banquo's ghost, the Monroe street bus case was revived yesterday to plague the Public Utilities Commission, but indications were it soon would be buried again.

Having twice rejected a plea of residents of Monroe street northeast that one route of the Rhode Island avenue bus line be taken off their street, the commission was confronted with a new petition for rehearing.

Because 30 days have expired since the last order was issued on August 6, however, the petition is expected to be rejected on a technicality. Richmond B. Keech, acting chairman of the commission, referred it to counsel for an opinion.

The complaints of Monroe street residents between Twelfth and Twenty-second streets have been before the commission for more than two years. Last March the commission, after due hearing, turned down the plea for a rerouting. Another hearing was allowed in July, and a similar order resulted.

Besides finding that the traffic condition was not so bad as portrayed, the commission held that any change in the bus route would arouse residents in the street affected and would be generally unsatisfactory.

The new petition for rehearing was signed by E. G. Sievers, of 2121 Monroe street northeast, and Glen M. Brumbaugh, of 1528 Monroe street northeast.

The commission, holding its first meeting in several weeks because of the return of Lieut. Col. Dan I. Sultan, approved a request of the Capital Transit Co. to purchase 30 new buses at an approximate cost of $336,000.

Holiday Toll of U. S. 304 Killed; 257 Die in Highway Accidents

At least 304 persons were killed in accidents over the Labor Day week-end, 257 of them in accidents on the highways, a survey yesterday disclosed.

But Washington escaped without a single fatality, though persons were slightly injured, however.

Capt. Milton D. Smith, commanding the traffic division of the Police Department, commenting on the District's safe week-end, said last night that he believed some sort of a record had been established for a city the size of the Capital. At the same time he praised articles on traffic dangers which have appeared in The Washington Post.

The Associated Press reported last night that new highway travel records were set in many sections of the Nation by the holiday crowds. From coast to coast there were reports of greater travel than in any year since 1929, and one Eastern railroad announced its business was "35 per cent greater than in any other year."

Travel increase of 25 per cent over last year was estimated by railway and highway officials on the West Coast.

New York City's train, ferry, ship, plane and bus terminals were choked with passengers Monday. Automobiles speeded both ways through the Holland Tunnel, connecting Manhattan with New Jersey, at the rate of 2,000 per hour, while the George Washington Bridge averaged 1,500 an hour.

The Nation-wide survey of Labor Day week-end deaths attributed 257 fatalities to highway accidents, 20 to drowning, 12 to airplane mishaps, 4 to trains, 4 to falls and 7 to other causes.

California led with 29 fatalities. Michigan was next with 25, and Pennsylvania had 24, including ten persons who burned to death in an airplane after it had crashed near Pittsburgh Saturday night.

Virginia had 12 dead and Maryland three.

Meanwhile Mrs. Emily Yatz, 65, of 428 L street northwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital here for several fractures fered when she was knocked down by an automobile on ... avenue between Tenth and Eleventh streets.

Edmond P. Ledoux, 22, of Whitinsville, Mass., driver of the car, took Mrs. Yatz to the hospital. He was not held by police.

Smoke Board Submits New Burner Rules

Regulations for Fuel Equipment Based on Two-Year Study.

Commission to Act After Public Hearing Set September 18.

Proposed regulations to govern the installation of fuel-burning equipment in Washington were submitted to Lieut. Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner, yesterday by the smoke control committee set up under the law passed by the seventy-fourth Congress.

A public hearing was scheduled for September 18 in the board room of the District Building, after which the regulations will be acted upon by the Commissioners.

H. K. Kugel, smoke regulation engineer, said the new rules will not prohibit the burning of bituminous coal in the District providing the proper fuel-burning equipment is used. The regulations, he said, are based on a study covering almost two years.

Emphasizing the efficiency and economy of proper fuel burners, a preface to the regulations states:

"Smoke is the result of the incomplete combustion of any fuel. The primary cause is the failure to secure a sufficient amount of air intimately mixed, at the proper temperature, with the combustible gases that are given off by the burning of the fuel.

"The secondary cause is carlessness, ignorance and indifference in the firing and operation of the fuel burning equipment.

"Smoke can be prevented by: (1) using a fuel suited to the squipment; (2) keeping the equipment in good condition; (3) firing carefully and intelligently, and (4) using automatic fuel-burning equipment wherever possible.

"Smoke is an indication of waste. Prevention results in more uniform heating, a saving in fuel and consequently reduced costs.

"Smoke has associates which also pollute the air. These include coke (partly burned fuel), ash and the sulphur gases. Little has been done to minimize them in small installations, but they contribute to the damage and discomfort of living in cities and require serious consideration.

"The division of smoke regulation is glad to advise the public in the proper method of firing as well as the use of proper fuels in the equipment they have."

The smoke law gives the Commissioners authority to enforce regulations against private residences, as well as commercial houses or industrial plants, and also covers steam locomotives.

All persons participating in a violation, including the landlord, the tenant, manager or fireman, may be held accountable, and the penalty is a fine up to $300 for each offense.

The proposed rules, besides setting forth technical equipment standards, tabulate fees for permits and certificates authorizing installation of boilers, furnaces and water heaters, as well as stokers, oil burners and gas burners.

Capt. Patrick A. Tansey, assistant engineer commissioner, is chairman of the smoke committee. Other members, besides Kugel, are Capt. Hugo P. Oram, director of inspection; Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer; L. S. Mohler, Building Owners and Managers Association; M. X. Wilderding, engineer; James E. Colliflower, Merchants & Manufacturers Association, and C. E. McGuire, representing the fuel equipment manufacturers.

Budge's Stale Play Dims Hopes Of Wresting Perry's Singles Title; Helen Jacobs Triumphs Easily

California Youth Looks Bad Beating Second-Rate Foe at Forest Hills; Dorothy Bundy, Alice Marble, Miss Pederson Win.

By the Associated Press.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 8.—Don Budge, the youngster they're counting on to beat back the challenge from England's Fred Perry and keep the United States tennis title in America, showed signs of staleness today from months of uninterrupted campaigning as he won from a second-rate opponent in the national championships.

As the lanky California redhead took the measure of Gene Smith, of Berkeley, Calif., who should have been nothing more than a punching bag for him, it seemed that Budge suddenly will have to snap out of it to reach the semifinal and ultimately what is expected to be a championship match with the peerless Briton. The scores of Budge's victory were 6—2, 6—3, 3—6, 6—3.

Willie Budge left a partisan crowd of some 3,000 in a state of uncertainty. Helen Hull Jacobs, of Berkeley, Calif., striving to become the first player to win the crown five years running, demonstrated to the satisfaction of all that despite a dislocated thumb on her racquet hand, she still rates as favorite to repeat.

Except for a brief period in the second set, when her baffling chop stroke went out of control, Miss Jacobs had no difficulty in disposing of Virginia Rice Johnson, of Boston, 6—0, 6—4, gaining the round of eight in which she will meet Gussie Raegener, San Francisco player, who broke into prominence yesterday beating Mrs. Mary Greef Harris, of Kansas City.

Others to progress were Dorothy May Sutton Bundy, of Santa Monica, Calif.; Helen Pederson, of Stamford, Conn.; Alice Marble, of San Francisco, and Gracyn Wheeler, of Santa Monica. In the quarter-finals Miss Bundy will meet Miss

Dawson Bows To Rally of Goodman

By the Associated Press.

Arcola, N. J., Sept. 8.—Johnny Goodman, Walker Cup star from Omaha, Nebr., won his first leg on the Arcola Cup today by defeating John Dawson, of Chicago, 2 and 1, in the 36-hole final of the eighteenth annual Invitation golf tournament of the Arcola Country Club.

Goodman had to come from behind to win. After losing the first three holes of the morning round, he was never in front until the tenth hole in the afternoon.

Dawson was 3 up at the halfway mark and added another to his margin by winning the first in the afternoon. Beginning with the fourth, however, Goodman regained his putting touch and won four straight holes to square the match.

They were still all square at the turn, Goodman shooting a sub par 34 as compared with Dawson's 37. A par 4 on the tenth put Goodman in front for the first time.

On the fifteenth Goodman went ahead again with a birdie 3 as compared with Dawson's par 4. The Omaha star sank a 15-foot putt to win the hole. They halved the sixteenth, but Goodman won the match on the seventeenth with another birdie, sinking an 8-foot putt after Dawson's putt for a 3 ran by the cup.

Brundage Flayed By Rafferty Over Convention Scene

By the Associated Press.

Houston, Tex., Sept. 8. — Jack Rafferty, vice president of the A. A. U., in a statement late today attacked Avery Brundage, president, for "planning a move to take the annual convention" from Houston and transferring it to Chicago.

Rafferty, president of the Gulf organization of the A. A. U., in a statement to the Houston Post called the move "hypocrisy, cowardice and un-American despotism to us in Texas and our friends the country over."

"Avery Brundage and his henchmen have added another chapter to this year's athletic blunderings by meeting secretly on shipboard on the S. S. Manhattan on the high seas for the purpose of planning a move to take the annual convention duly awarded to Houston at the New York convention and placing it at Chicago, home town of the A. A. U. boss."

Nats to Face Tigers; Eye 2d Place

Special Dispatch to The Post.

En Route to Detroit, Sept. 8.—The Nats toiled not today, but they spun into the first division on the impetus of the White Soxs' victory over the Tigers.

Whizzing westward tonight, the Nats are carrying their second-place ambitions into the strongholds of the enemy. At Detroit, at Chicago and at Cleveland they will be meeting foes with similar designs and only a game and a half separates the second-place and fifth-place clubs.

The Nats really didn't move into the first division as a bona fide first-division team, but as the result of the Tigers' defeat they mooched into a fourth-place tie with the Tigers.

But the Nats go into the West recognized as probably the "hottest" team in the league. Their last home stand saw the Washington Club emerge from sixth place to a point where second place is only one game distant.

Capt. Buddy Myer accompanied the Nats on their jaunt, but Manager Bucky Harris is content to leave Johnny Mihalic at second base in the interest of a thorough trial for Mihalic. But if the Nats need important victories near the close of the season in order to save third-place money which will net each player approximately $1,000, then Myer is expected to find his way into the line-up.

The Nats' jaunt through the West will open tomorrow when they meet the Tigres in the first of a two-game series. Bill Phebus, the rookie from Albany, who pitched impressively in his Washington debut last week, is expected to start one of the Detroit games.

14 Colts Vie Today In English Classic

Doncaster, England, Sept. 8 (AP).—Fourteen 3-year-old colts, one of them American-owned, are expected to start tomorow in the mile and three-quarters of the St. Leger Stakes, first run in 1776.

William Woodward's Boswell is the American-owned horse, but he is considered to have no better than a 20-to-1 chance in a field that includes the Aga Khan's Mahmoud, the Derby winner, and Lord Astor's Rhodes Scholar.

Rhodes Scholar, one of the favorites for the Derby until scratched because of the hard turf, ruled the favorite at 5 to 4, although there is some doubt that the colt can go the distance. Mahmoud, which runs best over a hard going, was the second choice at 7 to 2 in tonight's callover of the betting odds at the Vitcoria Club.

The others were strictly outsiders, with Mrs. J. Shand's Thankerton and A. G. Smith's Fearless Fox next in line at 100 to 7.

Chisox Toss Tigers Out Of Race

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 8.—The White Sox took over sole possession of second place and eliminated the Detroit Tigers' last mathematical chance at the American League pennant by trouncing the former champions, 7 to 5, in the only major league game of the day.

A six-run splurge in the first inning put the game on ice for the sox and dropped the Tigers into a three-way tie for third place with the Cleveland Indians and Washington Senators.

Cain Gives 16 Hits, Wins.

Elden Auker and Red Phillips were the victims of the big first inning. Six hits, including two baggers by Zeke Bonura and Jack Hayes and singles by Mike Kreevich, Luke Appling, Luke Sewell and Sugar Cain, produced the tallies.

Phillips, who relieved Auker after four runs were in, tightened up the rest of the way and limited the Sox to five hits and one run over the other eight innings.

Cain, although touched for 16 hits by the Tigers, was effective with men on the bases in chalking up his fifteenth victory of the year against ten setbacks.

Rosenthal Gets Run.

The only run the Sox made after the first inning came in the second when Lary Rosenthal doubled to right centerfield, took third on Al Simmons' error, and came home on Bonura's single.

The Tigers got to Cain for a run in the first on singles by Irv Burns and Charley Gehringer and two passes, another in the third on Goose Goslin's triple and Billy Rogell's base hit, to in the seventh on a walk, singles by Burns and Goslin and Simmons' fly, and another in the ninth on Rogell's two-bagger and Marv Owen's single.

35,500 Watch Giants Outclass All-Stars, Win on Passes, 12-2; Leemans Shares Game's Honors

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Polo Grounds, New York, Sept. 8. The Manhattan debut of "Mr. Leemans Goes to Town" was presented under the floodlights here tonight with the star showing to advantage in a role unworthy of his talents.

The Pixieeated wraith from Wisconsin and Griffith Stadium shared ground-gaining honors with Berwanger, Beise and LeVoir as his college All-Stars bowed to the professional New York Giants, 12-2, but only in the third quarter was he in the affray at a time when the collegians were in good position to really open up.

The iron-legged Tuffy from George Washington University picked up 16 yards in five sorties from scrimmage and lost three on another occasion. He returned three punts for a total of 63 yards and completed two of four passes for a net gain of 25 yards. One of his most notable feats was to punt out of bounds on the Giants' 3-yard line.

On the defense, Leemans intercepted one pass for a long gain and made one authoritative tackle.

Tuffy Joins Giants.

Following the contest, Tuffy became a recruit to the Giants' forces, joining his opponents of this evening for the professional league campaign which will find him appearing in Philadelphia against the Eagles of that city.

Completely outshining Bill Shakespeare, of Notre Dame, his successor on both of the occasions when he was removed from the game, Leemans won especial plaudits from the crowd for his return of punts. Taking Danowski's kick in midfield in the third period, Tuffy scampered 32 yards before he was brought down. Soon after, he dodged and twisted upfield 25 yards after receiving a kick.

Leemans first entered the game near the end of the first period and left midway in the second quarter. He went back in early in the third period and was taken out for good during the next intermission.

Big Schools Outclassed.

In not coming from anacknowledged "football college," Tuffy should be right at home with the Giants. In fact, tonight's result might be termed a victory for the so-called small-time colleges over the "big boys" from Minnesota, Stanford, Notre Dame, Alabama, Ohio State, Colgate, Northwestern, etc.

Numbered in the Giants' line-up were representatives of Oklahoma Baptists, Simpson, Emporia Teachers, Wichita, Davis-Elkins, Gonzaga, Ohio University, Texas Tech, Buffalo and Pittsburgh (Kansas) Teachers.

'Moth Ball' Lawsuit Held Full of Holes, Gets Thrown Out

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Sept. 8.—Two Atlantans who bet Bobby Jones would make his "grand slam in golf were allowed today to keep the $2,500 they won from Lloyd's in 1930.

Litigation over the winnings halted today when an attorney for L. M. Tatham, who sued for half the profits, asked that the action be dropped. Superior Judge Virlyn B. Moore dismissed the suit.

Charles E. Freeman and Dana C. Belser won their wager that Jones would capture both the amateur and open golf titles of Great Britain and the United States.

Tatham sued under an old Georgia law. The statute provides that unless the loser in a gambling transaction has filed suit to recover his money within six months after paying the bet, any citizen or taxpayer may claim half the money involved. The remainder would go to the county in which the bet was made.

Polo Grounds, New York, Sept. 8. The New York Giants, a football team of some repute in the National League, went to work on the collective body and person of a section of the All-American squad here tonight and did a masterful piece of dissecting, wringing a 12-2 victory out of their young and talented but woefully outclassed opponents before 30,555 fans.

Picked as clean as a chicken wishbone at a church outing by the expert and mechanical pros, and still pounding futilely at the Giants' first line of defense at the final whistle, the brilliant luster and mystifying hallow of "all" had been completely erased from the collegians' identification tag. The pros found them to be a bunch of clean-cut college boys who found the right ball park but the wrong ball club.

Leemans Shares Honors.

In defense of the All-Americans it must be remembered that half the original squad that held the Detroit Lions to a 7-to-7 stalemate at Chicago played in Texas a couple of nights ago, and was not available tonight. The section that performed here tonight was the weaker of the two. The New York delegation of All-Americans had the "names," but it seems the Texas boys packed the power.

Tuffy Leemans, who paraded under the alias of George Washington University's football team three years, paraded here tonight and looked very attractive running up and down the greensward in his bright yellow panties and Jersey. Tuffy played a marvelous game, completing two passes and tearing off gains of 4 to 15 yards at various times. Leemans shared the collegians' honors with Jay Berwanger, and the Chicago product didn't get going until late in the

Mrs. Vare May Give Up Golf Title

By Paul Mickelson.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Sept. 8.—Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, America's champion of women's golfing champions, may yield her national title this month and retire forever from important competition.

After 20 brilliant years of campaigning, during which she won the American title six times, the Philadelphia matron is seriously considering definite retirement. Her mind has not been made up but her closest friends are convinced she will join Virginia Van Wie, of Chicago, in retirement.

Mother of two children and 33 years old, Mrs. Vare has been a bit tired of national competition for several years and has told her friends she would like to quit. She didn't intend to compete seriously last fall until fired with the ambition to show younger girls, who spend all their spare moments on a golf course, that she could raise children and still come back to defeat them. As the world of golf applauded her comeback, she capped it by defeating the sensational Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, in the finals to win her sixth national.

Should Mrs. Vare surrender her championship without firing a shot this month, she will be the fourth national titleholder to quit undefeated since 1930. Bobby Jones retired after his grand slam in 1930; Miss Van Wie retired after winning the women's national the third time in succession in 1934, and Lawson Little, with two successive amateur doubles to his credit, turned professional last winter.

Since she qualified for her first national with a 93 at Shawnee in 1919, Glenna has won approximately 50 greater and lesser championships. Her only disappointments came in the British women's championships. Her most thrilling match, she says, was against Joyce Wethered at St. Andrews in '29. Glenna scored 34 on the front nine to lead her great rival but lost, 3 to 1, as Miss Wethered shot equally well on the last nine.

Scramble . . . at 6 a. m. next Monday, rain or shine, a record-breaking field of 210 men and boy golfers, will start what promises to be the wildest scramble in history for the National amateur golf championship. With Lawson Little on the sidelines, the tussle rates as strictly a toss-up. Among the starters at Garden City Golf Club will be the Walker Cup teams of England and the United States and eight former National titleholders.

Experts think the winner will come from the ranks of America's Walker Cup team which trounced the British, 9 to 0, at Pine Valley, but trying to pick anyone is simply guess work. No one player rates better than 20 to 1 odds.

John Goodman, of Omaha, former National open king, naturally rates as the heir apparent, but Albert "Scotty" Campbell, of Seattle, is the choice of many. Johnny Fischer, the Cincinnati putting genius, also rates a chance, along with Charley Yates, of Atlanta, and Walter Emery, of Oklahoma City, runner-up last year to Little.

Lawson Little, Smith, Thomson to Play Exhibition Match Here

Match Listed At Kenwood October 11

Wiffy Cox, Who Brought Trio Here, to Round Out Foursome.

By Dave Herman.

Four noted exponents of golf—Lawson Little, Horton Smith, Jimmy Thomson and Wiffy Cox—will appear in an 18-hole exhibition match free to the public at Kenwood Golf and Country Club Sunday, October 11.

Professional Cox is largely instrumental in bringing the world-famous trio to Washington, but the match will be sponsored by A. G. Spalding's, which has been putting on similar exhibitions on outstanding courses from coast to coast.

The match, involving two of the longest drivers in the world, one of the greatest putters in the game and a master of the zooming irons, promises to be an outstanding event on the District golf calendar.

Thomson, than whom there be no whomer in whacking a tee shot, will team with that amazing putter, Smith, against Little, the former British and American amateur ruler, and Washington's own Cox, the long iron expert.

Unique, indeed, will be the offering of a hole-by-hole description of each shot made by the professionals as they travel down the fairway. A truck with sound equipment will follow the contestants, and a well-known authority on golf will describe the shots.

Budge Appears Stale Winning Net Match

Little Miss Bundy, who crushed the second-seeded Sarah Palfrey Fabyan in the first round, advanced at the expense of Edith Moore, of Montclair, N. J., 6—2, 6—0; Miss Pedersen defeated Jean Burritt, of Toronto, 6—1, 6—2; Miss Marble beat Katherine Winthrop, of Boston, 8—6, 6—3, and Miss Wheeler eliminated Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of New York, 6—4, 6—3.

In beating Smith, Budge hardly looked like the player who conquered Jack Crawford in the Australian-American Davis Cup series last June, or who has beaten such other stars as Baron Gottfried von Cramm and Christian Boussus. The torch top truly was a whirlwind in the first set losing only two points on service, but thereafter he was just average against an opponent who was neither crafty nor durable enough to take full advantage of the opportunities offered him.

The most glaring weakness in Budge's performance was his usual booming service, which appeared to have lost virtually all of its boom. It lacked customary sting and accuracy as he failed to score a single ace on delivery. With a day of rest tomorrow, while Perry goes into action against Henry Culley, he may regain the touch, but expert observers shook their heads, asserting that on what he has shown to date, "this is not to be Don's year." His service was broken six times.

While Budge was having his troubles with Smith, Perry rehearsed with Ellsworth Vines, the California professional, for his match tomorrow with Culley. Never known to extend himself when the chips aren't down, Perry, as was expected, bowed to the salaried shotmaker, 6—2 6—4, 6—3.

Jimmie Foxx also hit a home run in the third inning with two teammates aboard. He pitched for the Red Sox for three innings, including the fatal ninth when the Terriers pounded out four hits good for six runs, and was charged with the defeat.

Santa Monica's Dorothy May Sutton Bundy, daughter of famed May Sutton Bundy, who reached the Forest Hills semifinals yesterday with a straight set victory over Edith Moore, of Montclair, N. J.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Win, lose or draw a second-division berth in the current dog fight for second place, Mr. C. C. Griffith's Washington ball team is scheduled to undergo a grand-scale face lifting ere another season sets in.

To the team that does slip into second place at the end of the 1936 season will go only the dubious distinction of finishing approximately 18 games behind the pennant-winning Yankees, which is scant comfort.

POVICH.

Thus, Mr. Griffith will be in face-lifting mood during the winter. The needs of the Nats are obvious. One big-league outfielder, one big-league catcher, perhaps one infielder and a passel of big-league pitchers will be on the order list.

Until Cecil Travis started banging the ball around, raising his batting average to .322 and reforming his evil ways in the infield, shortstop also was among Mr. Griffith's 1937 problems, but that difficulty appears to be happily settled.

For some reason, Manager Bucky Harris was never able to think of shortstop in terms of Cecil Travis until, in a dire emergency, he was forced to return Travis to the post. The lad who had been shuttling back and forth between the infield and outfield has been doing a better than tolerable job of it ever since and they can't laugh off his batting average.

For three seasons now the Nats have struggled along with Cliff Bolton representing its catching strength and there were times when it was indeed a struggle. At one point during this season, on the Nats' second Western trip, Bolton was the worst catcher in the league. And he never had been accused of being the best, or among the best.

Buddy Myer's strange illness, which has kept him out of the line-up almost since the start of the season, has clouded the Nats' 1937 infield prospects. Myer will be 34 when he returns to the Nats next season and there is no guarantee that he will be the same smart performer of 1935. Thus, Harris' reasons for giving Johnny Mihalic a thorough tryout.

Young Mihalic is apparently a most acceptable infielder. He came up from Chattanooga with an impressive .320 batting average and around second base he is more than faintly reminiscent of Myer. As a double-play pivot man Mihalic needs no apologies and if it is a question of throwing arms, Myer runs a distinct second to the rookie. There is also Mihalic's habit of hitting with men on base.

Rightfield remains a distinct handicap of the Nats. Jesse Hill and Carl Reynolds, both given a chance for the job, have failed to supply the necessary right-handed hitting strength on a team now preponderantly left-handed. Freddie Sington is still very much on trial, despite his .390 batting average in the Southern Association.

Unless Sington in these last few weeks of the season establishes himself as able to hit big-league pitching, Griffith will be very much concerned with acquiring another outfielder. Big Sington has shown vast improvement in the field and Manager Harris likes to think of him as a powerful hitter, but opinion is still very much reserved.

There isn't a stand-out pitcher on the Washington club. Buck Newsom, perhaps the best, is something of a confirmed in-and-outer; Earl Whitehill has been able to win only 12 games against 10 defeats; Jimmy De Shong has been something of a flash in the pan. Pete Appleton has been the most dependable and with Newsom forms the nucleus of any 1937 plans.

Despite his unfortunate debut when he allowed five runs while pitching two-hit ball, Ray Phebus is the brightest of the Nats' prospects. The fast-balling right-hander figures definitely in the 1937 plans of Harris and there's an outfielder down in Chattanooga named Taft Wright who batted .340 and drove in more runs than Sington, who also will be brought up for trial by Harris.

And, speaking of Harris, that young man's contract as manager of the Nats expires at the end of the season. If it is not renewed, then there must be some cock-eyed reasoning on the part of Griffith. All Harris has done is bring a club that was consigned unanimously to sixth place to within half a game of second place. That's not bad management. If he could only pitch——.

Jack Portney 'Runs Out' On Furr

District Boxing Commission doctors who examined Portney's hand declared, however, that there was no evidence of an injury that would prevent Portney from fighting, and his suspension followed.

Matchmaker Ahearn immediately set about to obtain a substitute opponent for Furr, declaring that the Monday night card would still be staged.

To a half-dozen welterweights of national reputation he sent telegrams offering them the Furr fight. Ahearn's chief hopes center about Jimmy Leto, Hartford, Conn., lad, who has victories over such as Lou Ambers, the world featherweight champion; Harry Dublinsky and Frankie Klick to his credit.

Janazzo Offered Bout.

Izzy Janazzo, of New York, who has a decision over Furr to his credit; Gerfino Garcia, Pacific Coast Mexican who floored Barney Ross, and Cleo Locatelli, of New York, are others Ahearn is seeking as Furr's opponent. He also has wired Jimmy McLarnin an offer of the fight, but holds small hope that McLarnin will accept.

Portney was the winner over Furr in a close bout at Baltimore last week and readily accepted the Monday night engagement which was to be the District's first 20-round bout, but suddenly he had a change of heart.

An offer to compete in a welterweight tournament in New York, which he has accepted, is believed to be Portney's reason for canceling the Furr battle. New York is not one of the 32 States affiliated with the National Boxing Association which, on the recommendation of the District Commission, will suspend Portney in those States.

Ahearn declared that he offered to raise Portney's percentage of the purse if he went through with the Furr battle, but that the Baltimore southpaw wanted no further traffic with Furr.

By the Associated Press.

Camp Perry, Ohio, Sept. 8.—The United States Marine Corps continued its winning ways in the national rifle matches today in capturing the infantry team match, feature event of the day.

Wilson Teachers Start Grid Drills

Daily four-hour workouts began yesterday for Wilson Teachers College gridmen in Central Stadium. Although the squad which reported yesterday numbered only 14 men, a turnout of approximately 25 is expected by the time school opens.

A total of 15 of last year's squad is certain to report along with at least three freshmen. The season opens September 26 at Central with Shippensburg Teachers as the opposition. Wilson is playing six games this year in contrast to four last season.

The loss of Phil Fox, star quarterback who was graduated, will be felt particularly.

Tailer Under Mark Over Garden City

Garden City, N. Y., Sept. 8 (AP).—Tommy Tailer, jr., of New York, playing his second round of the day on the course, shattered the record today for the Garden City Golf and Country Club as the advance guard began arriving to play in the United States Amateur tournament beginning here next Monday.

Tailer shot five birdies and went over par on only one hole to shoot the course in 70, three strokes under par and one stroke better than the competitive record set by Chick Evans 15 years ago when the course was 395 yards shorter. Tailer had a 76 on his first round.

Bob Donohue Shoots 85 at Kenwood

Bob Donohue, a 13-year-old boy no larger than his own driver, shot a remarkable 85 yesterday to win the Kenwood Golf and Country Club junior championship.

A protege of Wiffy Cox, Donohue played the outgoing nine in 41 and negotiated the tough back side in 44, despite an 8 on the thirteenth and a 6 on the fourteenth—two holes that cost him five strokes.

Seat Pleasant Fight Scene Tonight

The picked team of District amateurs put finishing touches on their training yesterday, pointing for their Richmond foes in tonight's show at the Duffy Stadium at Seat Pleasant. The first bell sounds at 8:30 o'clock.

With perhaps the best-balanced card of any amateur show presented hereabouts this year, the Seat Pleasant carnival will offer ten bouts, featuring seven champions.

Morton Meets Bowen.

Mike Morton, who has not appeared in a District ring since April, will test the metal of Brooks Bowen, Richmond champion, while El Brookman, another local favorite, will try his boxing skill on Jack Matthews, Richmond club-fighting sensation.

Other encounters which vie with each other in promised excitement present Hunter Crostic, undefeated in three starts locally, trading swings with Jimmy Ortiz, Guard middleweight, and Eddie Saugstad, former bantamweight champion, trying his lethal right hand on Earl Tucker, of Richmond. Tickets will be on sale at the stadium gate.

National Savings Ties Treasury Accounts, 3-3

By John R. Vosburgh.

A pair of champions refused to yield ground yesterday and the opening game of The Post Sandlot Association week-day play-offs ended in a 3-3 stalemate between National Savings & Trust Co., of the Bankers League, and Treasury Account and Deposits, of the Sports Center League.

The Treasury team was outhit, 7 to 3, but got two of its hits off Joe Garvey, speedball ace of the Bankers, in the third inning, along with two walks and all its runs in that frame. Some 1,500 fans watched the game.

The series resumes today on the same diamond, South Ellipse, at 4 p. m. Public Works Administration, champs of the Departmental League, collide with Resettlement Greenbelts, Federal "A" League winners. The game between National Savings and the Accounts and Deposits club has been rescheduled for Tuesday.

Treasury muffed a possible opportunity to win the game in the last inning when Ray Swann, its leftfielder, suffered an apparent mental lapse. With the score 3-3 and one out, Swann took first when Woody Gogfrey muffed his grounder and then stole second where a close play ensued when Catcher Otis Hilleary pegged to Second Baseman Neal Wells.

Umpire "Snitz" Nau called Swann safe as he slid into the bag but the National Savings player apparently thought he had been called out, for he began strolling off the diamond and was tagged out between second and third. Garvey then fanned Bob Raiford for the third out.

Garvey drove in the first Bankers run in the first inning with a single after Woody Godfrey had tripled. Accounts and Deposits came back to score all its runs in a bunch. Manager Mike Sklar walked but was forced at second by Earl Batton, who then stole second and scored on Harry Seay's double. Swann walked and stole second after Seay had taken third on Lafferty's fly to right center. Hal Chilcott then singled Seay across the plate for a 3-1 lead.

National Savings scored again in the fifth when Ben Burch walked, advanced to third when Garvey singled and Fox drew a pass and scored on an infield out when Burrell hit to short. In the sixth, Pitcher H. G. Lafferty, of Accounts and Deposits, who walked eight men, passed Wells and Godfrey and Wells took advantage of some slow infield play to score shortly afterward when Hilleary hit to short, Burch doubled and Jones replaced Lafferty, fanning Garvey.

Sand Baby Takes Narragansett Feature as Favorites Score

$121 Mutuel Returned by Double

Idle Along Is Second; Battling Girl Third; Victor Pays $5.70.

By the Associated Press.

Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 8.—After finishing second in four consecutive races, B. N. Kane's Sand Baby finally won a race when he captured the 1 1-16-mile of the Norwich, a claiming event that feature dtoday's card at Narragansett Park.

Fvored in the betting, Sand Baby came from far back to register a length in front of Mrs. W. R. Fleming's Idle Along, which was half a length ahead of the Araho Stable's Battling Girl.

Sand Baby was the fourth favorite in a ro wto win this afternoon. While Paul Codd's Hymarque cut out the early running with Idle Along and Grandpa's Boy closest in contention, Sand Baby was running fifth. Jockey Charley Swain waited until the field rounded the far turn and then sent Sand Baby to the top on the outside.

Sand Baby paid $5.70, $3.20, and $2.70. Idle Along returned $5.80 and $4.00. Battling Girl paid $5.30.

Glenn Morris Not To Be Pro Gridder

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 8.—Coach George (Potsy) Clark said today that Glenn Morris, the Olympic Decathlon champion, apparently had abandoned a plan to try out for a place on Clark's Detroit Lions professional football team.

Clark had announced earlier in the day that Morris was to come here for a tryout this week-end.

"Morris apparently has decided not to give up his amateur standing," Clark said. "I was to have received definite word today on whether he would report to us, and I haven't heard a word, so it looks as if the negotiations have fallen through."

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHOICE GOODS, $5.80, $3.50, $2.70; FITKIN, $11.40, $7.00; WROUGHT IRON, $3.60.

CHOICE GOODS, away well, moved up fast on the outside nearing the far turn, drew away into a good lead and dominated the running to the end. FITKIN raced prominently placed from the outset and held on willingly to the end, though never able to endanger the winner. WROUGHT IRON moved up on the inside leaving the backstretch and continued with good energy in the closing drive. KINDRED SPIRIT, unable to keep pace early, was going stoutly at the close. GOOD DAME was well placed in the run down the backstretch, was knocked back approaching the far turn and was unable to recover. BLUE CYCLONE closed considerable ground after being outrun early.

EMKAYTEE was taken under steadying restraint after gaining a prominent position, responded gamely when called upon and fighting it out in game fashion, outlasted HOLLUSCHICKIE at the end. The latter moved up on the outside leaving the backstretch and held on stubbornly when placed under punishment. SIS ROYAL had speed from the start, raced in closest pursuit of the pace and held on in determined fashion in the closing drive. KHAY, well placed, closed some ground, though unable to threaten the leader in the stretch run. LANDSCAPE, away fast, lacked speed to hold her position, dropped back, though finishing with a belated rush. ELIZABETH FARLEY, badly outrun for the first half mile, closed some ground when reaching the stretch.

TOANO had speed from the beginning, disposed of ALANAD for the command and opening up a good lead, was never threatened, though under urging to the end. ANTARCTIC was prominently placed the entire trip and held on in game fashion to the end. RIDGE MOR dropped back at the start and outpaced while racing wide, closed willingly in the stretch run. HIGH MONGUL made up some ground. SHINING JEWEL was well placed, though unable to gain clear sailing through the last furlong. BLACK MAIL closed some ground. DARK WAR tired. ZEVANAID lacked her speed from the stalls, moved up steadily in the run down the backstretch, unable to reach the leaders and retired steadily.

SAND BABY improved his position gradually after reaching the backstretch, moved up steadily and wearing down HYMARQUE when reaching the stretch, drew out in the closing strides. IDLE ALONG, prominently placed all the way, held on willingly to the close. BATTLING GIRL, unable to reach the leaders early, came with good energy in the closing quarter mile. GRANDPA'S BOY, well placed, was unable to improve his position under punishment. HYMARQUE displayed good speed, but weakened badly in the closing furlong. HADTOBE, poorly ridden, was taken up when racing into close quarters after straightening out on the backstretch.

PRINCE POMPEY had speed from the start, withstood repeated bids from ALICE BYRD, drew clear and held THIS WAY safe at the end. THIS WAY, under reserve early, moved up on the inside at the stretch turn and closed with good courage. ALICE BYRD was forwardly placed throughout and held on well to the close. FREE, far back early, worked his way up on the outside and closed a big gap. SILVERY WAY unable to improve his position under pressure. EARLY CALL faltered after leaving the backstretch. OVERSTIMULATE was never a threat.

IDENTICAL, outrun early, moved up approaching the far turn, finished in game fashion though unable to endanger the first two. FIRST SMILE, away slowly and far back early, closed with a belated rush. GLITTER GLOW went to the front at once, drew clear straightening out on the backstretch and withstanding a determined bid from CLAIMANT, shook off the latter and drew out, winning with speed in reserve. SCOTCH SOLDIER, under reserve until nearing the far turn, moved up stoutly when called upon and held on well in the closing drive. CLAIMANT was a forward factor the entire trip, though unable to keep pace with the first two in the closing drive and lasted to get a dead heat with BRUCEDALE. The latter finished willingly. SOUND MONEY was unable to enter into contention. COLD SPILL weakened steadily in the last three furlongs.

Cotton Jumps $3.50 Per Bale On Crop Report

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 8.—A sensational reduction in the Government's cotton crop report figures, cutting the indicated yield to only 11,121,000 bales, or 1,360,000 bales below the August 1 indication was followed by an excited advance of more than $3.50 per bale in cotton here today. December sold up from 11.49 to 12.27 and closed at 12.15, with the general market closing steady at net advances of 51 to 63 points.

Closing quotations were 9 to 19 points off the best. The Government report placed the condition as of September 1 at 59.1, and estimated the yield per acre at 179.2 pounds with an estimated area for harvest of 29,720,000 acres. Ginnings reported prior to September 1 amounted to 1,373,868 bales against 1,135,090 last year. Exports today 8,933 making a total of 283,682 for the season. Port receipts 51,983; U. S. Federal Reserve Plan Adopted by Mexico

Mexico, D. F., Sept. 8.—A banking set-up closely paralleling the United States' Federal Reserve System has emerged from the latest shaking-up President Lazaro Cardenas gave Mexico's monetary system. While the spending public was chiefly interested in the president's putting back into circulation the big, 12-gram silver pesos withdrawn in 1935, bankers found more important the increased powers he gave the Bank of Mexico.

Secretary of the Treasury Eduardo Suarez gave this explanation of the Bank of Mexico's new status: "It will be an institution on a plane of absolute autonomy, which will allow it to exercise with ease its functions as a central bank, consisting of the regulation of the emission and circulation of money, foreign exchange and the money market, and of support for associated banks."

Loans Increase; Deposits Decline

By the Associated Press.

Continuance of an upswing in commercial loans and a drop in demand deposits were shown last night in the Federal Reserve Board's weekly condition statement of reporting member banks in 101 leading cities.

The board's classification "other loans," which includes commercial advances and serves roughly as a guide to the volume of this lending, was fixed at $3,749,000,000 for the week ended September 2, an advance of $28,000,000 over the previous week and an increase of $109,000,000 in four weeks.

These loans also were up $470,-000,000 over the same week a year ago. Particular interest has attached to such advances because they are expected to give the first indication of any broad uptrend in business borrowing. Demand deposits dropped $44,000,000 under the previous week to $14,867,000,-000 on September 2.

Philanthropy Budget in U.S. 2 Billion a Year

Gifts to Churches First; Community Chests Got $70,000,000 in '35.

New York, Sept. 8.—The American people annually contribute to the general social welfare a sum between $1,500,000,000 and $2,000,-000,000, according to figures on philanthropic gifts compiled by the Index of the New York Trust Co. It is probable that the total of these contributions declined something like 40 per cent during the depression, the bank review states, and increased taxes are retarding recovery from the downward trend of charitable giving during recent years.

Contributions to churches take first rank in philanthropy, according to the Index, and total gifts to principal Protestant church organizations in the fiscal year 1935 amounted to $304,692,000. Funds raised by Community Chests throughout the country totaled in this same period approximately $70,000,000. Apart from direct gifts by living donors, 20 leading foundations, with capital funds aggregating $701,676,000, awarded grants, in 1934, amounting to $34,212,000.

"The cost of philanthropy," the Index concludes, "is necessarily a heavy one in such a nation as the United States and current estimates of about $1,000,000,000 donated annually for philanthropic purposes represents not what is actually needed by the recipient organizations, but what contributors have felt able to give under prevailing circumstances.

"With Federal taxes alone aggregating in the fiscal year 1935 some $3,500,000,000 and the Nation's total tax bill approximately $10,000,000,-000, out of an estimated national income of $531,000,000,000, the availability of the funds which will enable private philanthropy to continue its essential services becomes an increasingly serious problem."

Export Copper, 9.80, Is Five-Year High

New York, Sept. 8 (AP).—Export copper sold today at 9.80 cents a pound, a new high since April, 1931, and up from last week's quotation of 9.77½ cents.

Copper circles said a fair amount of business was done at the higher price. They expressed the opinion, however, turnover of the export metal would have to be more active at that level before any rise in the domestic price would be likely.

Steel Output Drops To 68.2% of Capacity

New York, Sept. 8 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week declined 3.3 points to 68.2 per cent of capacity, compared with 71.5 last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

A month ago operations averaged 70.0 per cent of capacity while a year ago the rate was 49.7 per cent.

The Market

New York, Sept. 8.—Markets opened the new autumn deal with vigor. Stocks began with a rush that carried them to new high prices on an increased turnover around 1,750,000 shares. Trading was the liveliest for the Labor Day re-opening since 1932 and the sales were the largest since July 29 of this year. Only a handful of stocks failed to join the rise. Bids were good in most sections. Cotton rose sharply and wheat was firm. December wheat closed ⅝ of a cent higher at 100⅞ cents a bushel.

With the passing of the Labor Day holiday Wall street had a fuller attendance than has been the case since early summer. Trading began with the most recent events tending on balance to favor the bulls. News of an advance by a leading maker in steel price for fourth quarter, announced at the week-end; the evidence before all eyes of a tremendous increase in travel in the holidays, and an obvious rise in retail trade with the beginning of autumn and the opening of the schools, kept the industrial picture well polished.

Changing Tunes.

For the day, at least, little attention was given to crop conditions, a subject which preoccupied the markets last month. Foreign news also was regarded as less upsetting, in spite of the warnings of the Secretary of State on the likelihood of an European war—at least so long as so many foreign battleships cruised about Spanish waters.

On the political side the markets had the benefit of the latest views of both candidates for the Presidency. Those of President Roosevelt came far nearer being approved, if taken at face value, than any coming from that source since the last election, but the hitch lay in the difficulty of reconciliation with actual practices during the four years of the New Deal.

In any case the financial district enjoyed at least a temporary respite from ringing denunciations of "Economic Tories," "Money Changers," and of others unfortunate enough to have property or to have opinions contrary to New Deal gospel. It welcomed (and looked not for the tongue in the cheek) the suggestion by the New Deal leader that it would be well to work against rather than for the upbuilding of class consciousness in this country.

Credit Nonsense.

In financial markets the principal occurrence was publication of the Treasury's terms on its new issues to refund and to secure additional cash. The premium of 1¼ points quoted today for the new Treasury 2¾ per cent bonds resulted from mathematical calculation. It is doubtful whether those who quoted this price gave any thought to the Government's credit position. They simply made the new issue fit into the schedule of yields for various maturities. The Treasury set the coupon rate and maturity. The market, influenced largely by an artificial reserve position, set the price. Knowing that banks scramble for Government bonds through necessity rather than choice, bond men smiled at Mr. Morgenthau's claim that the successive lengthening of maturities at the same coupon rate was evidence of growing confidence in Government credit.

If rates for credit were the measure of confidence in the Government, some one in Washington might explain why the Government paid 4½ per cent of nine-months' money in June, 1929, when assuredly there was no question about confidence in Federal credit. The same maturity now costs the Government 0.13 per cent, or about one-thirty-fourth of what it cost in 1929. The debt was rapidly declining in 1929. Now it is rapidly rising. The yield on twelve-year Treasury bonds was 3⅜ per cent in the summer of 1928 and now it is about 2½ per cent. In general the Government bond list weakened a little.

Upset in Francs.

Outside of the stock and bond markets the principal developments were a sharp rise in cotton, following the Government's estimate of a crop much smaller than that forecast a month ago, and a break in French currency. Cotton at one time was nearly $4 a bale higher. Francs were upset by news that the government had approved a fresh expenditure of nearly $1,000,000,000 on armament.

Whatever the necessity for that military preparation, it was felt that, with the government already pursuing an inflationary policy and operating at a deficit, the franc scarcely could stand any new burdens. The drop in francs that followed brought large engagements of gold for shipment from Paris and weakened the market for other gold currencies, at the same time elevating sterling to a new high price.

If the market continues in its present mood, either within the next few weeks this country will receive enough gold to increase greatly our excess bank reserves, or the franc will be divorced from gold, probably by means of a gold export embargo. The tumble in francs seemed to have a sobering effect on stocks, after they had showed signs of moving forward rapidly.

Money Rates.

Based on the rates charged customers by banks in principal cities, the money market was a stand-off in July. Average rate charged by New York City banks was unchanged at 2.44 per cent, according to a table prepared by the Federal Reserve Board. The rate rose from 3.51 to 3.61 (the highest since February) in other Northern and Eastern cities, but it fell from 4.39 to 4.35 per cent in Southern and Western cities, setting another new low record for that region, where business still is slack in all but the rapid consumption industries, dependent to some extent on Federal doles.

Exhaustion.

Prophecy of the early end of fuel supplies in this country seems to be in no imminent danger of exhaustion. A United States Bureau of Mines geologist predicts the exhaustion in 15 years of this country's known petroleum reserves. The same prediction was made 15 or 20 years ago by eminent geologists, who had been preceded by the prophets of an early end to our coal supplies. Such predictions scarcely will be made the basis of higher prices right away. Geology itself made enough advance in the past 15 years to open up enormous reservoirs of oil, and promises to continue. We may run out of corn and pork some day, but no one need fear any dearth of gasoline.

General Motors Sales Set All-Time Peak

Domestic sales to consumers for the eight months totaled 1,261,714 cars against 884,862 in the like 1935 period and the previous record of 1,168,710 in the first eight months of 1928. Domestic sales to dealers for the eight months totaled 1,255,485 cars against 952,343 a year ago and the former record of 1,235,-846 for the first eight months of 1929.

Job Recovery In U. S. is 25%; 50% in Canada

Royal Bank Finds Gain in Dominion Greater Than Here.

Montreal, Sept. 8.—In the monthly letter of the Royal Bank of Canada, Dr. Donald M. Marvin, the bank's economist, says that although the recovery in business during the past three years has been accompanied by expansion in employment in Canada and the United States, unemployment continues to be a major problem.

"In both countries," he says, "volume of employment fell to lower levels than it did in most of the other parts of the world. At the worst it amounted to about 15,000,-000 or 15 500.000 in the United States and to about 1,000,000 in Canada. At the present time there are between 10,500,000 and 12,000,000 unemployed in the United States and from 600,000 to 750,000 unemployed in Canada.

"In neither country has unemployment been reduced to a reasonable magnitude, but at no time in the depression or during recovery has unemployment been proportionately as large in Canada as it has been in the United States. If one considers the difference between the maximum of unemployment and the proportion of unemployment which prevailed in 1926, as 100 per cent, then Canada has traveled more than half of the road toward recovery in employment, whereas the United States has traveled only one-quarter along that road.

"In almost every one of the major categories of employment the present position of Canada is decidedly more favorable than is the position of the United States. In mining, for instance, stands the strong contrast between the position of the anthracite miners in the United States, where less than 50 per cent of the miners are employed, with that of the metal mines of Canada where the index of employment is now above 250 per cent of that in 1926.

Comparisons.

"In transportation in May, 1936, the last month for which detailed statistics are available for both countries, the United States index was 60.9 while that of Canada was 72.3. A simple average of the indexes of wholesale and retail trade shows 85 for the United States and 118 for Canada. In manufacturing the index was 85.7 in the United States and 102.7 in Canada.

"The United States employment index is based upon average employment between 1923 and 1925 and the Canadian index is based upon 1926. The following table which compares the latest occupational census of the two countries, shows that the proportion of the population of each country engaged in each major division of industry is remarkably alike. Farm owners and tenants are left out of both columns of the table. The number of workers gainfully employed constitutes 24.77 per cent of the population of Canada and 24 per cent of that of the United States if farm labor by unpaid members of the family is left out of the number of gainfully employed in both countries:

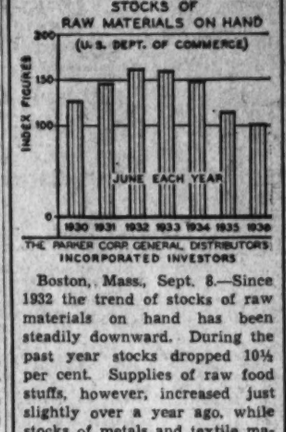
Raw Material Stocks Drop 10½% in Year



Boston, Mass., Sept. 8.—Since 1932 the trend of stocks of raw materials on hand has been steadily downward. During the past year stocks dropped 10½ per cent. Supplies of raw food stuffs, however, increased just slightly over a year ago, while stocks of metals and textile materials declined. Both stocks of manufactured goods and raw materials are smaller than for several years, which means that production activity has not piled up surpluses of goods.

Foreign Markets.

London, Sept. 8 (AP).—The stock market closed active and strong today, renewed buying being based mainly upon the decline in unemployment figures. Home rails rallied on reports that the threatened coal strike had been averted. Industrials, motors, tobacco, transatlantic and gilt-edged securities were in demand at higher prices. Oil shares eased on profit-taking sales, while mining issues moved irregularly.

Paris—Prices in the bourse closed generally firm, with the exception of banking issues and French rentes, the latter finishing about fifteen centimes lower.

Liverpool—Wheat futures closed fractionally higher on reports of improved flour trade and wet weather in the United Kingdom and the continent. Cotton traders were cautious pending the U. S. Bureau report, scattered hedging and liquidation being absorbed by covering and trade buying on the decline.

I.B.A. Organizes Group to Work With the SEC

Plans Will Be Discussed Tomorrow in 17 Leading Cities.

Plans for the establishment of a permanent national organization for self-government and co-operation with the Federal Government will be discussed at meetings of investment banking and over-the-counter securities dealers in 17 leading cities through the country tomorrow, according to an announcement by B. Howell Griswold, jr., chairman of the Investment Bankers Conference Committee. The cities in which the meetings will be held are Chicago, Cleveland, Kansas City, Denver, Pittsburgh, Minneapolis-St. Paul, New Orleans, Atlanta, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Little Rock, Memphis, Charleston, Nashville, Toledo and Louisville.

The new organization, to be known as the Investment Bankers Conference, Inc., is the outgrowth of a temporary organization known as the Investment Bankers' Conference Committee which was formed a year ago for the purpose of conferring with the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington on matters relating to the regulation of the business under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.

6,000 Bankers Eligible.

As a result of the success of this temporary organization the leaders in the movement both here and through the country as a whole have decided that a permanent organization is justified. If the venture proves to be a success, the organization will be the largest of its kind in the country, as there are about 6,000 investment bankers and over-the-counter security dealers who are registered under the law with the Commission in Washington, all of whom are eligible for membership in the conference.

Some of the more important purposes of the new organization, as set forth in its proposed charter, are:

1. "To promote through co-operative effort high standards of commercial honor and integrity and public confidence in the investment banking and securities business.

2. "To provide a medium through which its membership may be enabled, through representatives, to confer, consult and co-operate with Government and other agencies in the solution of problems affecting the public and the investment banking and securities business.

3. "To promote effective co-operation among members, and to investigate and adjust grievances between the public and members and between members."

Tackle Found By Pixlee at G. W. Camp

Special Dispatch to The Post

Camp Letts, Md., Sept. 8.—George Washington posed for the news reels here today—in football togs. The husky G. W. gridmen labored through a stiff workout for a good portion of the morning and everybody appeared satisfied but Coach Jim Pixlee, who could find no leading men for his movie.

The nearest approach to a standout during the day was a young sophomore from Los Angeles, Stan Grvavaz (oh, skip it), who at this writing is well in line for the vacant tackle berth left by the graduation of Capt. Harry Deming in June. According to the way the youngster is going, both tackle assignments are already in the bag, for Dale Prather, 210-pound regular last year, is back in uniform, bigger and better than ever.

After the cameramen finished with the perspiring athletes, many of the latter still had a lengthy session ahead of them.

200-Pounder Boots.

A long punting practice brought forth some sky-scraping boots from Nick Tihila, 200-pound fullback from Oregon, who failed to see much action as a sophomore last season. Tihila's long spirals stole the show from the rest of the aspirants.

Herb Reeves arrived today from his Arkansas home, apparently not suffering from his recent attack by a mad dog.

With the exception of the tackle positions, every other berth is still an unknown quantity and the candidates are fighting like Spaniards for the vacancies. According to the coaches they will be open until Friday, September 25, when the Colonials open the season against Emory and Henry.

All the varsity men but Henry Innes, of New York, an end, have reached camp. The news reel pictures will be shown in Washington theaters later in the week.

Mat Debut Here For Campofreda

Former Western Md. Grid Ace Vies Tomorrow.

Nick Campofreda, former Western Maryland grid ace and undefeated boxer, will make his wrestling debut here tomorrow night at Joe Turner's Arena as wrestling is brought indoors.

The former Green Terror, who promises to become a mat terror, has earned the praises of Rudy Dusek, headman of the famous Dusek riot squad, who predicts a bright future for the good-looking collegian. George Bothmer, veteran Baltimore trainer, is another who is unstinting in his praises for the youngster.

For his first opponent, Campofreda has drawn Carl McQuade, a newcomer to local circles, but who has proven his class on Western fronts. Campofreda and McQuade will tangle in a 30-minute time limit affair.

Giants Outclass All-Stars, 12 to 2

Cagey Ed Danowski, Giants' field general who, in the writer's opinion, was the outstanding star of the fray, capitalized on two good breaks to make his team's touchdowns. In both instances it was a pass from Danowski, a low sharp peg skimming over the linemen's heads or an easy lob into the flat zone settling like a balloon in the receiver's hands, that accounted for the scores. The first of these breaks came soon after Leemans had intercepted one of those short passes down the alley.

Leemans reached up and took it off Elvin Richards' fingertips, removing his mates from an exceedingly embarrassing position as the first period ended. But Dick Crayne, husky Iowa graduate, put the boys in deeper, kicking out of bounds on his own 31-yard line after two line bucks failed to budge the Giants.

Danowski passed to Burnett for 5 yards—after Richards had picked up 3 at center—then sent the latter zooming through tackle for a first down on the All-Stars' 9-yard line.

Corzine bucked the line for 7 yards. With the Stars concentrating on their line defense, Danowski pegged another to Richards near the side lines and he scored, standing up.

Danowski engineered the second touchdown through the air after Burnett intercepted one of Bill Shakespeare's passes and ran it back 40 yards to the Stars' 45. He passed to Richards for 14 yards and first down, then flipped another to Burnett who side-stepped Shakespeare and stepped off the remaining 44 yards for the score.

Giants Don't Waste Efforts.

Danowski's passes spelled the difference between defeat and victory for his team. The All-Stars made 10 first downs to the pros 7, piled up 114 yards from scrimmage to the pros 55, but gained only 63 yards on their passes as compared with 117 for the Giants.

Danowski had one punt blocked on him, Vernal Le Voir, late of Minnesota, crashing thrugh to bat down the ball; and Tony Sarausky had one blocked by Wayne Millner, who recovered the leather beyond the end zone to score his team's only points.

The Giants' victory can be attributed to the fact that they saved the killing punch, offensive or defensive, for the crucial moment. They didn't exactly lie down and let the youngsters walk over them, but after the collegians had churned up so many yards of green turf, mustering their forces for a goal-ward drive, the Giants braced and either held or hit the ball carriers so hard they fumbled. Usually it was the Giants who recovered.

All Stars' Drive Halted.

And, lest the figures deceive, It must be noted that six of the All-Stars' first downs were earned in the last 5 minutes of play when the home team felt reasonably certain its 10-point advantage would be sufficient. Dick Heekin, the Ohio State juggernaut, Shakespeare and Berwanger were the spearheads of this belated and futile drive.

Heekin and the English poet's namesake personally took the ball from midfield to the Giants' 23-yard line by their brilliant running. But the pro blood of the Giants came to a boil and the drive came to naught.

Again Berwanger, running and passing to Reese, chalked up three first downs and planted the ball on the 9-yard line, and again the Giants were beginning to get their starch up when the final whistle dispensed with need of same.

Only on one occasion were the college boys within hitch-hiking distance of their objective, and that was the result of a break early in the game. Riley Smith, former Alabama quarterback, punted to the Giants' 31-yard line and the ball was returned to his team at that point when the Giants were detected in the act of holding. Two line plays failed to gain and Smith dropped back for a placement, but it was a weak effort and far short of its mark.

District Girl Races Helen Stephens

Olympic Champion Faces Charlotte Wade Here on Saturday.

With the great Helen Stephens, superwoman sprinter of the world, as the leading lady, the annual U. S. Government track and field meet, Saturday, in Central Stadium is assuming classic proportions. At least 200 athletes will compete in the interdepartmental struggle with a liberal collection of former college stars dotting the field.

The great Helen, queen of the late Olympics and holder of the world's records at virtually every women's sprint distance, will arrive tomorrow. She will be met by a reception committee which will include Senator Champ Clark, of Missouri, her home State. Miss Stephens will be accompanied by Dee Boeckman, coach of the Olympic women's track team.

The young miss from Missouri will meet Charlotte Wade, of the Department of Agriculture, in a special handicap race probably over the 200-meter distance. Miss Wade possesses a brilliant track record, which includes a sensational race with Stella Walsh in Chicago in 1934.

With the close of entries yesterday for the Government meet, it was evident that the event is drawing the biggest field in its history. The struggle for the departmental team championship promises to be exceptionally keen, with the Department of Agriculture defending its title against an ambitious field.

General Accounting Office looms as one of the chief threats to the Aggies' honors, boasting a strong team of young stars not long out of college. About 40 entries are expected from the various CCC camps in the Washington area.

Leading athletes in the men's meet will be Arnold Preheim, 1934 National Decathlon champion; Roger Leverton, University of Richmond's one-man track team, and Thomas F. McNelly, captain of Holy Cross' track team of 1933 and finalist in the broad jump in the Olympic tryouts in 1932. McNelly is also a sprinter and hurdler, entering in ten events.

A warm battle for the District A. A. U. individual trophy is expected among Preheim, McNelly, Leverton and Dr. Ben Chetwood, of Agriculture, who are entered in the ½-mile, 1-mile and 5,000 meters.

1. Find the apartment that meets your requirement—in the section in which you want to live.

2. Note the key letters and the number at the end of the ad. For example: D-5.

3. Then find the letter of the alphabet (in this case, D) at the top of the map. This means the apartment is located somewhere between the D at the top and the D at the bottom of the map.

4. Then look for the numeral (in this case, 5) at either side of the map. Where the D and 5 meet is the vicinity in which the apartment is located.

Somerset County Buys Coal Mines

Special Dispatch to The Post

Somerset, Pa., Sept. 8.—Bidding against Pittsburgh and Somerset interests for the properties of the Quemahoning Coal Co., in Somerset County, the Somerset County commissioners purchased at sheriff's sale in the 133 tracts to satisfy liens on $119,636.68 due the county in back taxes. A price of $1,500 was paid.

Reports have it that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is prepared to lend some $300,000 to the owners of the Quemahoning Coal Co. provided the taxes are paid and the RFC can have first lien on the property. Brucker Group Warned to Help Senate Inquiry

Election Committee Will Call Hearing if Data Is Not Furnished.

By the Associated Press.

Warning that failure to co-operate with the Senate Committee investigating campaign expenditures would result in immediate harings in Michigan was sent yesterday to managers of Wilbur M. Brucker's campaign for the Republican nomination for Senator in that State.

The committee was advised by Louis R. Glavis, its chief investigator, that co-operation in furnishing records and information had been obtained from all organizations and candidates in Michigan "except the treasurer or other officials of Brucker's campaign for the United States Senate."

In a telegram signed by Chairman Lonergan (Democrat), Connecticut, the committee told Archie P. Frazier, manager of the Brucker campaign:

"Please notify by noon Wednesday whether you will co-operate by furnishing information; if not the committee will be required to call hearings in Michigan in a few days and issue subpenas."

The telegrams said the committee had "no desire to injure or embarrass you or any other officials of Brucker's campaign."

The committee added, however, that "we are operating under Senate authority and have the power and the intention to obtain the information sought."

Brucker, a former Governor, is seeking the Republican nomination in opposition to Senator Couzens. Couzens recently announced his support of President Roosevelt.

The committee's action yesterday was taken just a week before the Michigan primary election, which will be held September 15.

An investigation of charges that a fund of approximately $3,000,000 had been accumulated for use in the Michigan campaign was ordered last week by the Special Senate committee.

Co-operation Claimed.

Detroit, Sept. 8 (AP).—Archie P. Frazier, manager of Wilbur N. Brucker's Senate campaign headquarters here, said today his office had co-operated fully with the investigators for the Senate campaign funds committee, and that he was "at a complete loss to understand" the committee's threat to call hearings in Michigan.

Frazier said theinvestigation apparently was intended to "harass and cause inconvenience," but said he would continue to supply any information the investigators requested.

English Woman Flier Ill of New York Heat

New York, Sept. 8 (AP).—Mrs. Beryl Markham, the English flier who braved the Atlantic Ocean in her monoplane, surrendered to New York's heat today and was ordered to bed in her hotel suite by her physician.

Mrs. Markham's bout with the heat terminated a Fifth Avenue shopping expedition, on which she had hoped to purchase new dresses to replace the silk shirt-and-slacks combination she has worn since she crashed in Nova Scotia territory Saturday.

Meanwhile, the city planned to honor her with ceremonies at City Hall tomorrow afternoon, at which Mayor LaGuardia will officiate.

Simplified Rules Will Govern Contest for Packards and $200

Less Than Two Hours Spent With Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers at Keith's in "Swing Time" Qualifies All to Participate in Competition.

Have you been to see "Swing Time" yet?

Can you answer the question: "Why Do I Like Fred Astaire?" . . . in 25 words, or less?

If you have (to question No. 1 above) and, if you can (to question No. 2) you stand a chance to win a large piece of cash money and a flock of theater tickets, besides.

And, on top of that, another chance to write a few words about the . . . Twelve New 1937 Packards . . .

What you do is simplicity itself. Go to the box office at Keith's, where Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire are packin' 'em in daily with their new song and dance flicker, "Swing Time." Return the lovely smile of the young lady who passes out tickets and change, as you get yours of each. Give up the pasteboards to the ticket-taker at the door and allow yourself to be escorted down the aisle. Then, relax—for 17 minutes less than 2 hours of Rogers and Astaire at their very best.

And, when the show is over, collect two contest entry forms as you leave the theater; one of them will ask you to tell, in 25 words, or less, what you like best about the new Packard six; the other, to describe, also in 25 words or less, "What I Like Best About Fred Astaire."

The 12 best answers to the first question, from all over the country, will bring to winning contestants 12 brand new 1937 Packard Six automobiles.

And the second contest, open to residents of Washington and vicinity, will return $200 in cash and 244 guest tickets to Keith's to the winners. First prize, $50; second, $25; five third prizes of $10 each; ten fourth prizes of $5 each, and 25 fifth prizes of $1 each.

In addition, four tickets to Keith's will be awarded to each cash-prize winner in the "What I Like Best About Fred Astaire" contest, plus 58 pairs of tickets to those submitting the next best 25-word appreciations of Fred's entertainment abilities.

The rules of each contest will appear on your contest entry forms. Swing into it, folks! Those 12 Packards and those $200 and those 244 guest tickets are just waiting for you to reach out and claim 'em!

Driver Seized In Auto Crash Fatal to Wife

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 8.—Orrin L. McCloskey, salesman, driver of the car which crashed into the machine of his brother last night near here, causing the death of Mrs. Edna McCloskey, Orrin McCloskey's wife, was arrested late today on a charge of manslaughter and released in $500 bond for a hearing September 27 before Magistrate C. Edward Heard.

Detective William Peters, who swore out the warrant, in a statement tonight said he charged McCloskey with manslaughter in the death of his wife because after crashing into the car of his brother, Leslie McCloskey, he left the scene immediately without rendering assistance, went to his home, changed his clothes, passed the scene of the accident again while the car of his brother was still burning and again failed to stop to inquire as to what had happened.

McCloskey told officers that shortly after his wife, accompanying his brother and family for a visit in New Jersey, left their home, he decided his wife needed more money and started out to overtake his brother's car; that he did not know it was the car of his brother which he crashed into until some hours later, when he was informed at the hospital where he had gone for treatment for injuries.

McCloskey's wife died instantly in the crash and her body was badly burned in the fire which enveloped the Leslie McCloskey car. Mrs. Hilda McCloskey, 34, of Townley, N. J., wife of Leslie, is in a critical condition tonight and Leslie and his two children, Harold, 8, and Kenneth, 13, still are patients at the Washington County Hospital.

Citizens Indorse Plea of Ruhland

A plea by Dr. George H. Ruhland, Health Department chief, for more inspectors in his jurisdiction was indorsed last night by the Columbia Heights Businessmen's Association.

The association, in indorsing Dr. Ruhland's appeal for an increase of health inspectors, pointed out that no increase in that branch of the department has been made in 20 years, although the District has increased nearly a third in population.

The meeting, Columbia Heights' first since July, was held in the Tompkins Building, Fourteenth and Monroe streets northwest. While members perspired freely, plans for the eighth Santa Claus lane this Christmas were discussed. B. A. Levitan was appointed chairman of the lane committee.

Mahon Is Victor.

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 8 (AP).—G. Heyward Mahon, Greenville merchant, defeated his follow-townsman, Joseph A. Bryson, for the Fourth District's seat in Congress, in a run-off Democratic primary today.

On returns from 232 of 250 precincts, Mahon piled up 28,468 votes against 24,240 for Bryson, an attorney and former States legislator, for the post made vacant by the recent death of Representative John J. McSwain.

Aiken Victorious.

Montpelier, Vt., Sept. 8 (AP).—George D. Aiken, farmer and horticulturalist, appeared assured of the Republican gubernatorial nomination tonight with only five of Vermont's 248 cities and towns unreported in today's primary.

The present Lieutenant Governor had a lead of more than 3,000 votes over H. Nelson Jackson, Burlington banker and newspaper owner. Ernest E. Moore, speaker of the Vermont House, was third, while John Reid, a real estate man new to politics, trailed.

Col. Jackson conceded defeat at midnight and extended his best wishes to the Lieutenant Governor.

The other State-wide contest was one-sided. Nearly complete returns gave the Republican nomination for U. S. Representative to the incumbent, Charles A. Plumley, who didn't conduct an active campaign.

His opponent, Edwin B. Meekins, the only Townsendite in the primary, was defeated by more than a three-to-one margin.

There was no Democratic contest for the nominations.

Arizona Returns

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 8 (AP).—Gov. B. B. Moeur, seeking the Democratic nomination for a third term, trailed R. C. Stanford by 2,985 votes tonight in returns from 14 complete and 39 incomplete precincts of the State's 446.

The vote: Moeur, 4,872; Stanford, 7,857.

The Townsend plan was an issue in the Democratic congressional race, in which M. T. Phelps, one of 11 candidates, carried Townsendite indorsement and Louis B. Whitney, Phoenix lawyer, made a vigorous campaign against the plan.

Mrs. Nellie T. Bush, the only woman among the 11 seeking Representative Isabella Greenway's seat in Congress, visited the State's population centers today, flying her own plane in a final appeal for votes. Some of the cities she visited are 400 miles apart.

Gov. Martin Leads.

Seattle, Sept. 8 (AP).—Gov. Clarence D. Martin took the lead in first returns in the Washington State primaries tonight for renomination, polling 233 votes in returns from eight of the 2,866 precincts in the State.

Following him in the Democratic primaries was J. C. Stevenson, of Seattle, with 200 votes. Stevenson campaigned on a "production for use" platform. Otto Case, State treasurer and Townsend supporter, received 46 votes.

Former Gov. Roland H. Hartley led for the Republican nomination in the same number of precincts with 58 votes, followed closely by Ralph A. Horr, former Congressman, with 56 votes. Walter F. Meier, of Seattle, polled 15 votes.

Force Million Times Greater Than Gravitation Is Described

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 8.—A newly found force a million times stronger than gravitation was described at the Harvard tercentenary today.

Its existence was originally reported by the Carnegie Institution of Washington last April, it was measured today.

Dr. Gregory Breit, of the University of Wisconsin, said it is something that appears when two atomic particles approach within twenty-eight trillionths of a centimeter of each other. At that point is an attracting power equal to 11,100,000 volts of electricity.

It is the affinity that a positive and negative charge of electricity would have for each other at that close distance. These distances are a reality in the interiors of atoms.

For that reason the discovery is thought to be the force which holds atoms together and has been described as the binding substance which keeps creation from disintegrating, that is, keeps solid matter from dissolving into thin gas or perhaps into mere radiation.

40 Times Greater.

The force is 40 times greater than the forces of attraction or repulsion in electricity, or those of attraction in magnetism.

In a symposium on man Dr. William Emmanuel Rappard, University of Geneva, held that "economic nationalism," of which he said Germany and Italy are now the foremost examples, will, if unchecked, use the forces of science for "universal suffering, devastation and death."

In a third section of the tercentenary, biology, the history of the plants was used to show that there never could have been the lost continents of Atlantis and Mu, supposed to have sunk, respectively, beneath the Atlantic and the Pacific Oceans. If they had existed, said Prof. Elmer Drew Merrill, of Harvard University, they would have bequeathed at least one plant of common ancestry to Europe and America. Not one such has been found, he said.

Dr. Rappard said that all nations have some degree of economic nationalism; that the newer nations of Europe tend toward it strongly, and that Germany and Italy are its present strongest representatives.

"Could Not Survive."

"The progress of the last century," he said, "in the arts of destruction, particularly since the World War, has been such that the civilization which has developed since the Middle Ages probably could not survive the shock to which it would be exposed tomorrow if economic nationalism were to engender the same political consequences to which it has ever given rise in the past."

A new approach to understanding the automatic actions of a living body was reported by Sir Joseph Barcroft, of Cambridge University.

He sought the source of respiration, the nervous control which makes breathing automatic. With strong lights he was able to photograph unborn sheep, when they were no bigger than the size of the hand, and only in the first third of their prenatal stage.

Touched with a fine rod on the nose, they stretched and contracted rhythmically, for some time. Although no breath was possible, Sir Joseph said this indicated the beginning of the organization of nerves that control respiration.

Death Trial Opened.

Leola, S. Dak., Sept. 8 (AP).—Dr. A. R. Martell, 30-year-old dentist, went on trial today for the slaying of Lela Halverson, Madison, S. Dak., school teacher, whose nude body was found in a hotel room here last October.

Typhoid Hits Hospital.

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 8 (AP).—An outbreak of typhoid fever at the Columbus State Hospital was blamed for one death today and steps were taken to inoculate the more than 2,900 patients and 300 employes in the institution.

Fireman, Envoy Made Friends By Auto Crash

The limousine of Senor Don Miguel Lopez, Minister from Colombia, and the sedan of Joseph A. Mayhew, 1811 Kearney street northeast, a captain in the Fire Department, collided yesterday afternoon, and it is a shame the crash and its aftermath couldn't have been recorded in a sound picture.

The picture then might be shown to all the terrible-tempered Mr. Bangses of Washington motordom, the drivers who, as soon as a fender is scraped, leap to the street, apoplectic and shrieking.

The collision occurred at Eastern avenue and Bladensburg road. It must have looked exciting, for the police radio ordered all policemen in the neighborhood to rush to the scene.

On arrival, the officers found Minister Lopez and Capt. Mayhew engaged in pleasant conversation. The diplomat gave Capt. Mayhew his embossed card, and Capt. Mayhew gave him his name. There was a bent fender on one of the cars, a crumpled running board on the other, but neither men saw any reason to get excited, the insurance company would take care of that.
